NO INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE.

His Lordship Says England Would Like to Promote Bimetallism, but Cannot at Present Reopen the Indian Mints. Germany Will Wage No Tariff War.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—Lord Salisbury has sent to Ambassador Hay the reply of the British government to the proposals of the American bimetallic special commission, headed by Senator Wolcott. It is a diplomatically worded note.

His lordship says that the government of Great Britain is not able to reopen the India mints at present. He regrets the inability to accede to the proposals of the American commissioners. Great Britain having as great an interest as the United States and France in securing a stable par exchange for gold and silver and an enlarged use of silver.

In these circumstances, continues Lord Salisbury, the British government does not see the desirability of an international monetary conference, but will be pleased to consider any other practical suggestions from the United States.

Lord Salisbury encloses with the note a copy of the statement of Sir J. Westland, head of the financial department of India, which was under discussion at the meeting of the cabinet council last Saturday, and which takes strong grounds against the reopening of the India mints.

Senator Wolcott was out of the city. Ambassador Andrew White came from Berlin last Saturday. He has avoided publicity, but has had several conferences with Senator Wolcott. In the course of an interview with a correspondent Mr. White said that Germany's action as to bimetalism will depend upon England's. Discussing the possibility of a tariff war, Mr. White said:

"I do not believe that Germany will inaugurate a tariff war with the United States. The German press and many German statesmen have been very bitter against the Dingley law; but I think they are now beginning to realize that an increased prosperity will enable the United States to buy as much as under the lower tariff."

A DEATH FUSILADE.

Brave Britishers Dispersed Rebellious Tribesmen In Face of a Murderous Rain of Bullets—Climbed Indian File Along a Narrow Path—Many Killed.

SIMLA, Oct. 21.—According to advices from Fort Lockhardt, the revolting tribesmen, having occupied Dargai ridge, which commanded Chagru, on the Samana range, General Sir Yeatman Biggs sent the Second division of British soldiers to dislodge them.

The position was a very strong one, on the summit of a precipitous hill, reached only by a single path, along which the attacking force, consisting of the Gurkha regulars, the Dorsetshire regiment, was obliged to climb in Indian file, three batteries meanwhile shelling the Sangars.

The British suffered a temporary check when they reached the open space and were exposed to an accurate fire. After a prolonged artillery fire the Gurkhas were reinforced by the Gordon Highlanders. Then followed a magnificent rush across the open space in the face of a murderous fusillade. The enemy stood their ground till the British reached the rocks below, down which the tribesmen could not see to fire and then they fled pell mell. The losses of the Gurkhas and the Gordon Highlanders were severe.

POWER TO PRESERVE ORDER.

Military Reservation Established In Alaska to Aid Randall.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The secretary of war has issued an order creating a military reservation in that part of Alaska lying within a radius of 50 miles of St. Michael. The purpose is to confer upon Lieutenant Colonel Randall the necessary legal authority to preserve order and protect property in this section of the country, both of which are believed to be jeopardized by the large number of lawless characters gathered near the south of the Yukon.

PLEAD FOR THE INDIANS.

Appropriation of More Money Urged at the Episcopal Missionary Council.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 21.—The usual services of prayer and litany preceded the business of the Episcopal missionary council.

The Rev. Mr. Paddock, representing the church students' missionary association, spoke. The Rev. Mr. Sanford of Oklahoma spoke with regard to the work of the church among the Indians in that territory and the Indian Territory. He said there were 15,000 Indians and only a very small and inadequate missionary force. He asked the council to make an appropriation to help them and offered a resolution to that effect. The resolution was referred to the committee of the board of managers.

Bishop Whipple and others supported the resolution.

Bishop Tuttle announced that the Rev. G. A. Cartenson, who was to deliver a paper on "The Prayerbook as a Missionary Agent," was unable to be present. He believed that next to the Bible it was the most important work in church literature.

The Rev. W. V. Tunnell, a colored man, read a strong paper on missionary work among colored people. The speaker said it was time the church adopted a method of conducting this branch of its missionary work that would fit and harmonize with the facts involved. He closed the present methods, as being out of date and not doing all that should be done by the church in behalf of the colored race.

Pope Asks That He Be Not Removed From Catholic University at Present.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Definite details have become available concerning the cablegram sent by Cardinal Rampolla expressing the desires of Pope Leo concerning the case of Dr. Schroeder, professor of dogmatic theology at the Catholic university, which has seriously agitated the board of directors of the university during their present meeting. A letter had been received from Cardinal Steinhuber at Rome, stating that the pope had expressed a desire that Mgr. Schroeder should not be removed at the present time.

As this was not directly from the vatican a member of the executive committee of the Catholic university cabled to the authorities at the vatican for an official expression of the pope's wishes on the subject. A cablegram to Monsignor Martinelli was received on Sunday last. The cable directed the delegate to communicate in a delicate manner to the board of directors of the university that the pope desired that no change be made in the status of Dr. Schroeder as professor of the university at the present time.

A substitute confession of faith was afterward proposed, which likewise failed of passage. The church now stands with its old confession of faith.

Fighting the Forest Fires.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Oct. 21.—The mountain inhabitants of this county are fighting to save their home from fires that are sweeping over the ridges, and unless a drenching rain falls today many buildings and much other property will be lost. The long dry weather has exhausted the water, and the mountain ranges are all tinder. Some of the fires are maliciously started, others accidentally, and but in few instances have the people been able to smother them out.

Attacks the United States.

MADRID, Oct. 21.—The Imparcial has made a violent attack on the United States, based on the alleged departure from American ports recently of filibustering expeditions bound for Cuba. The Imparcial urges the Spanish government to ask explanations of the government of the United States.

Mayor Harrison Will Speak In New York.

BLISS TAKES HOLD FOR TRACY.

Presided at a Big Republican Meeting. Said to Openly Indicate the Administration's Preference—Belittling of George's Strength Decried.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—John O. Sheehan, the Tammany Hall leader, has received the following dispatch from Mayor Harrison of Chicago: "Will be with you Oct. 28, accompanied by a large delegation of Cook county Democrats."

The straight Republicans left no means untried to make the massmeeting at Lenox Lyceum noteworthy for attendance and influence. Secretary of the Interior Bliss presided, General Tracy and Governor Black spoke and big overflow meetings were addressed by different speakers.

The presence of Secretary Bliss is taken as an open indication of the attitude of the administration in General Tracy's favor.

Richard Croker is credited with the prediction that Van Wyck will have a plurality of 75,000 and that 50,000 is "safe to bet on." Meanwhile there is much more talk of wagers and odds than there is outward and visible sign of betting and the actual placing of money has not as yet begun to any marked extent.

Conservative men are beginning to comment upon the belittling of the George vote by leaders of the regular parties and recall to attention the vote of 1886, in which the single taxer received more than 65,000, when before election no one would concede him a third of that total. The deduction the conservatives make is that George will surprise the minimizers of 1897 as he confounded those of 1886.

Politicians of all sorts are greatly interested in the probable effect of the bitterness displayed in municipal politics upon the results in the state at large. The effects principally discussed are those effecting the chances of Wallace and Parker, respectively the Republican and Democratic nominees for chief judge of the court of appeals, and those of the legislative candidates individually. It is conceded that the bitterness developed between the partisans of Low and Tracy, if not stronger than that between George and Tammany, is more in evidence and likely to be more widespread in its results.

Straight Democrats claim—though they can give no substantial basis for their assertion—that Parker will run so far ahead of Wallace in Greater New York as to assure his election. Already there are charges of trading in legislative candidates, and the unusual length and complexity of ballots cannot fail to confuse the more illiterate voters.

Denounced the Dingley Law.

BERLIN, Oct. 21.—At the meeting of the Central Association of German Industrials to elect delegates to Prince Hohenlohe's committee for drafting new commercial treaties Herr Buck, who was the chief speaker, denounced the Dingley tariff as "the most complicated, contradictory and uncertain tariff ever conceived."

VIEWS OF THE MINISTERS

The Letter Which Was Adopted at the Meeting Yesterday Afternoon and Read Before Congregations Last Night—A Departure From Custom.

The ministers of the city met in the parlors of the Young Men's Christian association yesterday afternoon, and condemned the action of the Cleveland and Pittsburg railroad in running excursions on the Sabbath day.

Those present were Reverends Swift, Taggart, Reed and Huston. The meeting was one of short duration, but in that time the following letter was written:

"Messrs. E. A. Ford, general passenger agent, and L. T. Loree, general manager of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg:

"Gentlemen: In view of the evil effects, social and moral, that must result to the communities along the line of your railroads, as well as to all concerned, in running excursion trains on the Lord's day, we most respectfully and earnestly request you to stop the 'Sunday excursions' on the Cleveland and Pittsburg railroad.

"We make this request and urge your compliance with it out of respect to the law of God and the rights of man.

"These Sunday excursions are in direct violation of God's law of the Sabbath day and in conflict with the laws of our state forbidding secular labor on the Sabbath day.

"They are in opposition to the Christian sentiment of the communities through which they pass. In their offer of cheaper rates for that day than any other day of the week they are unjust discrimination against all who believe in the sanctity of the Sabbath day, and, moreover, aid insidious temptation to the desecration of God's holy day, which honorable men should not sanction.

"These excursions deprive your employees connected with such trains of the needed rest of the Sabbath day; and, as the violation of one part of the moral must tend to weaken respect for the other part of the same law, the running of these trains must not only be oppressive to all employed on them, in depriving them of their God-given rest day, but must be most demoralizing to them, as well as those patronizing them.

"They are a departure from the custom that so long prevailed in the management of this railroad, to which we hope you will return, and hereafter steadfastly maintain."

The letter was read in all the churches whose pastors was present at the meeting, and it will be forwarded to the officials of the road within a few days.

NEWER GOLDFIELDS.

Canadian Officials Know of a District Richer Than the Klondike.

It is well known in Ottawa that reports have reached the several departments of the government lately from officers in the Canadian service in the Yukon country. The minister of the interior issued a pamphlet the other day upon the Yukon mining district, but beyond sketch maps and photographs by William Ogilvie, chief of the boundary survey, it contains nothing really new.

The cause of this reticence is easily explained. The government dreads the consequences of a rush to the goldfields of that inhospitable region and is unwilling by giving publicity to the facts recently received from officers as to the wonders of the goldfields to contribute to an overpopulation of the Yukon while no means yet exist of getting in an adequate food supply.

But it has leaked out that the reports which came down by the last mail from Fort Cudahy, and which are now in the government's possession, are such as put the accounts of the returned miners with which the newspapers have been filled for days completely in the shade. It is known that discoveries have been made of placer grounds far exceeding in richness even the marvelous deposits of the Klondike. Just as the miners deserted the paying placer diggings at Forty Mile camp when the tardy news of the Klondike discovery reached that section, so, about June 1, scores of miners and prospectors at Klondike were leaving their claims for the newer and richer fields.

These are situated farther up the Yukon, in the Stewart river district. Should these diggings prove to be anything like as rich as reported by the government officials this will be the greatest goldfield ever discovered. The Stewart river, an affluent of the Yukon, drains an immense area and innumerable creeks, all of which are said to be marvelously rich in gold. Another advantage of the new district is that it is many miles nearer the coast than Klondike by the White, Chilkat and Dyea pass trail, the chief routes traveled by prospectors bringing in their supplies.—Dispatch to New York Herald.

King of the Mosquito Coast Forced to Flee to Jamaica.

Until quite recently there was but one king on the two American continents. Now he is suspended from his job. He is king of the Mosquito Coast, an unpleasant country lying between Nicaragua and British Honduras. The Mosquito Coast is under an English protectorate, the king's salary being guaranteed by Nicaragua.

When in full enjoyment of his regal dignity, he had a salary of $5,000 a year.

The king's name is Clarence. The Nicaraguans covet his dominions. His majesty and his chief advisers have been at a considerable disadvantage in all diplomatic negotiations owing to the fact that it is part of their court etiquette to be drunk on all public occasions.

The king's state costume consists of an old but imposing full dress uniform which formerly belonged to a captain in the British navy.

The republic has now refused to pay his pension, and he has appealed to England for support. He fled to Jamaica. There an allowance of $7.50 a day was given to him pending the settlement of the question. On this sum he is living in luxury, surrounded by a few devoted courtiers.—Exchange.

He Reckoned Without the Law.

Some years ago William L. Everett, a resident of Hempstead, N. Y., who loved money better than he did anything else, induced his wife to separate from him and support herself in consideration of a payment to her of $700 in cash.

From that day until he died, recently, Everett considered that deal the best bargain he ever made during his lifetime. He, however, counted without the law, for now that it has been discovered that he leaves about $15,000 in cash his wife will come in for her dower share.

Everett was so close that he would not even have a fire in winter and seldom ate anything but raw potatoes, turnips and bread. The baker's wagon was the only one that stopped at his miserable home. He lived alone and kept his neighbors away from his house. He was found suffering by Anthony Wheatley and removed to the latter's home, where he died.—New York Telegram.

Mrs. R. P. Cowell of Walnut Valley, Warren county, has been missing the children's playthings of late. The snake escaped, but was discovered later chasing a mouse about the room. After swallowing the mouse a blow with a broomstick laid it low.

Mr. Cowell dissected the snake and found all the children's playthings in its stomach. The snake had seven rattles. The region about Walnut Valley is alive with snakes this season.—New York Times.

rapidly nearing the other shore. Three minutes, and, dripping wet, but safe, they were scrambling up the south bank and speeding away over the bounding turf with the baffled pursuers still two miles behind.

And these were the tracks that Wallace found as he came hurrying back down stream.

Saturday again Fred Waller and his faithful horse spent on the open prairie, for in the darkness he found it impossible to make his way. The moon was gone by 1 o'clock, and her light had been all too faint before. But Sunday, just a little after noon, he had come in sight of the goal he had sought through such infinite pluck and peril, the Sidney road, and as he gazed at it from afar, peering at it as usual from behind a sheltering bluff, his heart sank into his boots. He had come too late. There on that distant trail were the tiny columns of blue smoke floating skyward which told of burning wagons, now in crumbling ruins. Worse than that, here close at hand, over on the other side of the long, shallow swale, were two score Indian warriors in all their barbaric finery, excitedly watching the coming of other victims.

With a moan of anguish, Fred Waller marked, a mile beyond and rapidly approaching them, a four mule ambulance with a single soldier cantering along behind.

"Oh, my God, my God!" he groaned aloud. "I am too late after all!"

But the wagon halted on the distant hills. The Indians, absorbed in their catlike watch, were eagerly gesticulating and excitedly pointing to some object far beyond. Several of their numbers lashed their ponies into a tearing gallop and sped away in wide circuit to the southward, keeping the bluffs between them and the wagon. Others followed part of the distance. He knew the maneuver well. Already they were planning the surround. In helpless agony he watched, for he was powerless to aid—powerless even to warn. He seized his ready carbine, loosened the cartridges in his belt and looked eagerly to Jim's girths. Then once again he faced the southeast and saw, far away across the waves of prairie, a little puff of dust and a little black dot—a rider—coming full tilt in the wake of the wagon.

"Who can it be?" he wondered. "Can it possibly know of this ambushade?"

All too late. A sudden flashing signal from the leader, and all at an instant, with trailing feathers, with warcry and the thunder of many hoofs, the painted band has whirled across the ridge in front and is down in the dip beyond. Every Indian has vanished from his view and whirled into sight of the victims on the crest beyond.

In an instant, too, Fred Waller is in saddle and spurring on to the ridge which they have just left, and then once more he reins in where he can just peer over the crest. He notes with a cheer of joy that the charge is checked—that the Indians have veered off and are now dashing in a great circle around the central point on the height beyond. He sees the wild stampede and tangle of the mules, the overthrow of the ambulance, the quick, cool, resolute reply of the attacked. He marks with a glow of mad delight, of reviving hope, that there is not a woman or child with the party.

"Thank God!" he cries aloud. "It isn't Mrs. Charlton!" He waves his hat with exultation as he sees a pony stumbling in death upon the prairie and his rider limping painfully away. He knows now that they are soldiers, holding their own for at least a time, and that all depends on getting aid for them before nightfall. Far up the valley on the other side he had marked at noon a dust cloud sailing slowly toward him. It must be the sorrels or the grays hastening back to clear the Sidney road. Here is the thing to do—gallop back, recross the river, meet and guide them to the rescue. There is still time to get them here before the sun goes down, if only the besieged can hold out that long.

One more glance he takes at the stirring picture before him, longing to drive a shot at the nearest Indians, and as he gazes there comes staggering, laboring into sight from around a point of bluff beyond the beleaguered party a horse all foam and blood, who goes plunging to earth only a few yards away from the ambulance and rolls stiffening and quivering in his death agony, but the gray haired old rider has leaped safely to the ground, and his carbine flashed its instant defiance at the yelling foe. Even at that distance there is no mistaking the well known form. Fred Waller's wondering eyes have recognized at once—his father!

Now indeed he speeds away for help. Now indeed has Jim to run for more than life. Turning his back upon the thrilling scene, the little trumpeter goes like a prairie gale, whirling back to the valley of the Platte.

The sun is sinking behind the bluffs, and its last rays fall on a bullet riddled ambulance; on the stiffening bodies of a half dozen slaughtered animals—a horse and some mules; on a grim, de-terminated little band of soldiers—two of them sorely wounded. The red shafts gleam on a litter of empty cartridge shells and tinge the canvas top of the overturned wagon. Out on the rolling prairie several hundred yards away the turf is dotted here and there by Indian ponies, the innocent victims of this savage warfare. Such Indian braves as have fallen have long since been picked up by their raging comrades and borne away. Despite their numbers never once yet have the savages managed to reach the defenders. Time and again they have swooped down in charge only to be met by cool, well aimed shots that tumbled some of their numbers to the turf and sent the others veering and yelling into the old familiar circle. At last they are trying the expedient of long range shots from different points of the compass, hoping to kill or cripple the whole party by sundown. The bullets clip the turf and scatter the dust all over the ridge. There is practically no shelter, for the ground is too hard to dig. Old Sergeant Waller is prostrate with a bullet through the thigh. Colonel Gaines has bound his handkerchief tightly around his arm. The driver lies flat on his face—dead. Every now and then the others turn longing eyes southward, hoping for some sign of infantry coming from the post, so many a mile away. They know well that Edwards will have levied on every wagon in Sidney to bring them, but not a whiff of dust cloud do they see. One of the soldiers gives a low moan and clasps his hands to his side, and Cross mutters between his set teeth, "Five minutes more of this will settle it."

But what means this sudden scurry and excitement among the besiegers? Why do they crowd and clamor there at the north? What can they see over that ridge beyond the little stream? Presently others join them, then more and more. Then there are whoops of rage and few ill aimed, scattering shots. Three or four of the red men ride daringly, tauntingly down, as though to resume the attack, and shout vile epithets in vilest English in response to the shots with which they are greeted, and then they, too, go riding away. "Lie down, you idiots!" yells Captain Cross to the two soldiers who would spring up to cheer, but a moment more and even the wounded wave their feeble hands and join in the triumphant shout. The ridge is cleared of every vestige of the foe. The warriors go speeding away eastward toward the Platte. Far out over the prairie, to the northeast, a troop of blue horsemen is driving in pursuit, and over the neighboring crest come a half dozen friendly forms and faces, spurring their foam flecked horses in the race.

"Look up, sergeant! Look up, old man! Here's Fred himself. Didn't I tell you he was no deserter?" It was Cross' voice, and it is Cross' strong arm that lifts the wondering, trembling veteran to his feet. The young fellow has leaped from his horse and is springing toward them. With a wondrous look of relief, of inexpressible joy, of gratitude beyond all words, of almost heaven born rapture mingling with the sunshine in his old face, the sergeant stretches forth his trembling arms and cries aloud: "My boy! My boy!"

CHAPTER XIV.

INNOCENT OR GUILTY?

The provost sergeant at Fort Robinson is a man who has seen and heard a great deal in the course of his army life, and who has the enviable faculty of knowing everything that is going on around him without appearing to know anything at all. It had been his duty, a day or two previous, to expel from the limits of the reservation a rascally pack of gamblers, a species of two legged prairie wolf that in the rough old days on the frontier followed every movement of the army paymasters and lured and trapped the soldiers until every cent of their money was gone. In point of number the gamblers were strong enough to take care of themselves in case of Indian attack, yet rarely did they venture far from the protection of the nearest troops. Driven out of post and forbidden to return, they had simply camped with their whole "outfit" at the lower edge of the military reservation, where the laws of the state of Nebraska and not the orders of Uncle Sam took precedence. And here they "set up shop" again and had and indicate this pathway to her daughters. There are too many unhappy—to many unhealthy women in the world. At every gathering where women meet alone, the story is heard of sickness and nervousness and despondency.

The woman who suffers in this way makes a mistake to consult the average obscure physician. If she does so, the chances are that she is told that her trouble is nervousness or insomnia or indigestion or heart trouble. It does not happen very often that this diagnosis is correct. When by some fortunate chance she is told the truth, that she is suffering from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism, she is told at the same time that she must submit to the obnoxious examinations and local treatment so embarrassing to a sensitive woman. All this is unnecessary.

The wise woman will seek the advice of some specialist of world wide reputation. Dr. R. V. Pierce is such a man. For thirty years he has been chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. During that time, with the assistance of a staff of eminent physicians, he has treated thousands of ailing women. He is the inventor of that wonderful medicine for women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine acts directly on the delicate and important organs that make maternity possible. It cures all weakness, disease, internal ulceration and inflammation and debilitating drains. It has transformed thousands of weak, suffering women into healthy, happy, robust wives. It is for sale by all good medicine dealers.

There was also a urinary difficulty, and I felt in fact generally used up and as though I was breaking down. I tried two or three different remedies, but they did not do me the least good. I seem if anything to be getting worse. Having heard Doan's Kidney Pills so highly spoken of I made up my mind I would try them and I procured a box at the W. and W. Pharmacy. He sees the wild stampede and tangle of the mules, the overthrow of the ambulance, the quick, cool, resolute reply of the attacked. He marks with a glow of mad delight, of reviving hope, that there is not a woman or child with the party.

"Thank God!" he cries aloud. "It isn't Mrs. Charlton!" He waves his hat with exultation as he sees a pony stumbling in death upon the prairie and his rider limping painfully away. He knows now that they are soldiers, holding their own for at least a time, and that all depends on getting aid for them before nightfall. Far up the valley on the other side he had marked at noon a dust cloud sailing slowly toward him. It must be the sorrels or the grays hastening back to clear the Sidney road. Here is the thing to do—gallop back, recross the river, meet and guide them to the rescue. There is still time to get them here before the sun goes down, if only the besieged can hold out that long.

One more glance he takes at the stirring picture before him, longing to drive a shot at the nearest Indians, and as he gazes there comes staggering, laboring into sight from around a point of bluff beyond the beleaguered party a horse all foam and blood, who goes plunging to earth only a few yards away from the ambulance and rolls stiffening and quivering in his death agony, but the gray haired old rider has leaped safely to the ground, and his carbine flashed its instant defiance at the yelling foe. Even at that distance there is no mistaking the well known form. Fred Waller's wondering eyes have recognized at once—his father!

Now indeed he speeds away for help. Now indeed has Jim to run for more than life. Turning his back upon the thrilling scene, the little trumpeter goes like a prairie gale, whirling back to the valley of the Platte.

The sun is sinking behind the bluffs, and its last rays fall on a bullet riddled ambulance; on the stiffening bodies of a half dozen slaughtered animals—a horse and some mules; on a grim, de-terminated little band of soldiers—two of them sorely wounded. The red shafts gleam on a litter of empty cartridge shells and tinge the canvas top of the overturned wagon. Out on the rolling prairie several hundred yards away the turf is dotted here and there by Indian ponies, the innocent victims of this savage warfare. Such Indian braves as have fallen have long since been picked up by their raging comrades and borne away. Despite their numbers never once yet have the savages managed to reach the defenders. Time and again they have swooped down in charge only to be met by cool, well aimed shots that tumbled some of their numbers to the turf and sent the others veering and yelling into the old familiar circle. At last they are trying the expedient of long range shots from different points of the compass, hoping to kill or cripple the whole party by sundown. The bullets clip the turf and scatter the dust all over the ridge. There is practically no shelter, for the ground is too hard to dig. Old Sergeant Waller is prostrate with a bullet through the thigh. Colonel Gaines has bound his handkerchief tightly around his arm. The driver lies flat on his face—dead. Every now and then the others turn longing eyes southward, hoping for some sign of infantry coming from the post, so many a mile away. They know well that Edwards will have levied on every wagon in Sidney to bring them, but not a whiff of dust cloud do they see. One of the soldiers gives a low moan and clasps his hands to his side, and Cross mutters between his set teeth, "Five minutes more of this will settle it."

But what means this sudden scurry and excitement among the besiegers? Why do they crowd and clamor there at the north? What can they see over that ridge beyond the little stream? Presently others join them, then more and more. Then there are whoops of rage and few ill aimed, scattering shots. Three or four of the red men ride daringly, tauntingly down, as though to resume the attack, and shout vile epithets in vilest English in response to the shots with which they are greeted, and then they, too, go riding away. "Lie down, you idiots!" yells Captain Cross to the two soldiers who would spring up to cheer, but a moment more and even the wounded wave their feeble hands and join in the triumphant shout. The ridge is cleared of every vestige of the foe. The warriors go speeding away eastward toward the Platte. Far out over the prairie, to the northeast, a troop of blue horsemen is driving in pursuit, and over the neighboring crest come a half dozen friendly forms and faces, spurring their foam flecked horses in the race.

"Look up, sergeant! Look up, old man! Here's Fred himself. Didn't I tell you he was no deserter?" It was Cross' voice, and it is Cross' strong arm that lifts the wondering, trembling veteran to his feet. The young fellow has leaped from his horse and is springing toward them. With a wondrous look of relief, of inexpressible joy, of gratitude beyond all words, of almost heaven born rapture mingling with the sunshine in his old face, the sergeant stretches forth his trembling arms and cries aloud: "My boy! My boy!"

CHAPTER XIV.

INNOCENT OR GUILTY?

The provost sergeant at Fort Robinson is a man who has seen and heard a great deal in the course of his army life, and who has the enviable faculty of knowing everything that is going on around him without appearing to know anything at all. It had been his duty, a day or two previous, to expel from the limits of the reservation a rascally pack of gamblers, a species of two legged prairie wolf that in the rough old days on the frontier followed every movement of the army paymasters and lured and trapped the soldiers until every cent of their money was gone. In point of number the gamblers were strong enough to take care of themselves in case of Indian attack, yet rarely did they venture far from the protection of the nearest troops. Driven out of post and forbidden to return, they had simply camped with their whole "outfit" at the lower edge of the military reservation, where the laws of the state of Nebraska and not the orders of Uncle Sam took precedence. And here they "set up shop" again and had and indicate this pathway to her daughters. There are too many unhappy—too many unhealthy women in the world. At every gathering where women meet alone, the story is heard of sickness and nervousness and despondency.

The woman who suffers in this way makes a mistake to consult the average obscure physician. If she does so, the chances are that she is told that her trouble is nervousness or insomnia or indigestion or heart trouble. It does not happen very often that this diagnosis is correct. When by some fortunate chance she is told the truth, that she is suffering from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism, she is told at the same time that she must submit to the obnoxious examinations and local treatment so embarrassing to a sensitive woman. All this is unnecessary.

The wise woman will seek the advice of some specialist of world wide reputation. Dr. R. V. Pierce is such a man. For thirty years he has been chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. During that time, with the assistance of a staff of eminent physicians, he has treated thousands of ailing women. He is the inventor of that wonderful medicine for women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine acts directly on the delicate and important organs that make maternity possible. It cures all weakness, disease, internal ulceration and inflammation and debilitating drains. It has transformed thousands of weak, suffering women into healthy, happy, robust wives. It is for sale by all good medicine dealers.

Mr. G. H. Garner, of 168 Jackson st., the well-known manufacturer of ice cream, says: "I think my trouble started from a cold. It set in with a soreness and stiffness over my whole body; my appetite was poor, and I was troubled a good deal with a bloating at the stomach. There was also a urinary difficulty, and I felt in fact generally used up and as though I was breaking down. I tried two or three different remedies, but they did not do me the least good. I seem if anything to be getting worse. Having heard Doan's Kidney Pills so highly spoken of I made up my mind I would try them and I procured a box at the W. and W. Pharmacy. I had not taken over half the box before I was entirely free from all my trouble, my appetite good and my old time vigor restored. I have recommended them to many of my friends, among them Mr. P. J. Green, V. S., and they all speak of them in the highest terms. I can honestly endorse Doan's Kidney Pills in every particular, knowing them to be A No. 1 and well worth a trial by anyone."

IT IS ONLY A RUMOR

But It Startled Some Members of the Board.

LIVERPOOL TALKED QUARANTINE

There Was Nothing In It, and No One Knows Who Started It—Some People Object to River Water—Foraker Club Did Not Go to the Train.

A wild report was on the streets last night, and it caused a great deal of comment until it became known that it was untrue. It said that Wellsville's board of health had become so lenient in quarantining scarlet fever and diphtheria that Liverpool had decided to establish a shot gun quarantin at Jethro bridge and allow no Wellsville people to go there until the system had been changed. As several hundred people from this place work every day in Liverpool, the report occasioned excitement.

Didn't Meet the Train.

The Foraker club expected to give the senator a rousing reception at the station last night, but the program was not carried out. His friends in Wellsville didn't like some of his companions, and did not want their demonstration misunderstood.

No meeting of the club was held as many members went to Liverpool. They will meet next Saturday evening.

The central committee are arranging for a big demonstration Oct. 30. The club will entertain the speakers in style.

Didn't Get the Man.

It has been known for some time that John Kirk was over the line in Beaver county, but the information was not given to the authorities. The man has been working on a farm digging potatoes. Officer Warren and the railroad detectives finally located him, and he was arrested, but the officers did not bring him to town last night. Requisition papers are necessary.

Don't Like the Water.

Many people in the city are complaining because of the water dispensed by the department. They say it tastes like the funny tribe smells, and that they have no desire to eat a mess of fish every time they want a drink. There is no remedy until the river rises and allows a little fresh water, dirty though it may be, to come this way.

The News of Wellsville.

Alex Smith and children have gone to West Virginia where they will reside near Mt. Union.

Old employees of the shops are meeting men who doubt the return of prosperity with the statement that the rush of work at the shops has not been equalled since 1892.

H. J. McCartney, of Lisbon, is in town.

William Banfield was here from Iron-dale last night on business.

The board of trade will hold another meeting next week, and something important is expected when the result is announced. They are progressing rapidly in the switch matter, and no one will be surprised if work will begin immediately after the meeting.

A horse of McLean Bros. was driven to Lisbon yesterday and died soon after it returned to the stable.

A STATEMENT FOR SHERMAN.

Sheriff Martin in Harrisburg With His Side of the Shooting.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 21.—Sheriff Martin of Luzerne county has been in Harrisburg with his attorney, George S. Ferris, to confer with Governor Hastings, who was unavoidably absent. The executive wrote to the sheriff recently asking for a statement of the shooting at Lattimer, to be used by Secretary of State Sherman in making reply to the Austrian government, which has instructed its minister at Washington to get all the details of the affair.

The sheriff has prepared a statement giving his side of the story, which will be submitted to the governor in confidence on his return from Philadelphia. He declines to make public the document for fear the opposition might use it to advantage in the trial of the sheriff and his deputies for murder. The statement in brief recites that the sheriff and his deputies were in the discharge of their duty as public officials when the shooting occurred.

ADOLPH LUETGERT'S FATE.

One Man Stands Between Him and Death—Juror Harley Remains Firmly For Acquittal—Jury May Be Held Until Saturday Night.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Another night passed without a verdict in the Luetgert case. Some kind of a report is expected today.

For a time it was rumored that if the jury had not agreed by today it would be discharged as soon as it reported its inability to reach a verdict. This, however, is not the case. It is the firm determination of Judge Tuthill to keep the jury until Saturday night or late Saturday afternoon before he permits them to go with a disagreement. He has announced that both state and defense have spent so much money and time and the case has been so long and difficult to try that he will not consent to the discharge of the jury until there is no hope whatever of a verdict being received.

The jury stands about where it did. Reports vary from 9 for the death penalty to 3 for acquittal to 11 for death and 1 for acquittal. The one juror holding out for Luetgert is Harley, and it is thought that if he was to change front there would be little time lost. Juror Holabird is also credited with favoring the acquittal of the prisoner, but it is thought he will come around quickly if Harley could be induced to vote for conviction.

The feeling among the jurors who are in favor of the death penalty is high against Harley and they have done some very plain talking to him. At one time they even sent for Judge Tuthill to know among other things, if 11 men could compel one to vote with them, or if a verdict would be valid if but 11 men signed it. This is the incident that gave to the state that there is but one man standing between Luetgert and a death sentence.

SIXTY NEW FEVER VICTIMS.

Record Broken at New Orleans—Situation at Other Places.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 21.—All previous records as to the number of new cases has been broken. Sixty new cases have been entered in the books of the health board. At the same time there have been six deaths.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Surgeon General Wyman's bulletin of new cases and deaths from yellow fever is as follows: Mobile, 8 cases, 1 death; Edwards, Miss., 7 cases; Scranton, Miss., 16 cases, 1 death; Pascagoula, Miss., 3 cases, 1 death.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 21.—The bulletin issued by the board of health names five cases of yellow fever and one death.

A telegram from Birmingham announces that the "state government has been temporarily removed to Birmingham, that the governor and all state officers are located there." This is a distortion of the facts. The government is located here by the constitution and cannot be changed except by vote of the people. There is no provision for temporary removal. Furthermore, all the state officers are not located at Birmingham. Secretary of State Jackson, Auditor White, Treasurer Ellis and the governor's private secretary, Cary, are here.

DANA LAID TO REST.

Tracy and Croker Among Prominent People at the Funeral.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The funeral service over the remains of Charles A. Dana took place in St. Paul's Episcopal church at Glen Cove, L. I. Among the pallbearers were Justice Willard Bartlett, Congressman Frank Bartlett, General James H. Wilson, Prof. Charles S. Sargent of Harvard, Charles Dana, a cousin of the dead editor, and General Benjamin F. Tracy. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Dr. William R. Huntington, rector of the Grace church, New York, assisted by Rev. John Camack, rector of St. Paul's church of Glen Cove.

Among the prominent people who attended the funeral were United States Senator Thomas C. Platt, Marshal P. McMahon Bourke Cochran, ex-Judge Henry E. Howland, Elihu Root, Charles Stewart Smith, Judge Frederick Smyth, Public Works Commissioner Collis, Postmaster Vancott and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Croker.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—At a meeting of the commandery in chief of the military order of the Loyal Legion of the United States Rear Admiral Bancroft Gherardi was re-elected commander-in-chief of the order.

Taint Transmitted by Drunkenness.

A special study of hereditary drunkenness has been made by Professor Pellmann of Bonn university, Germany. His method was to take certain individual cases, a generation or two back. He thus traced the careers of children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren in all parts of the present German empire until he was able to present tabulated biographies of the hundreds descended from some original drunkard. Notable among the persons described by Professor Pellmann is Frau Ada Jurke, who was born in 1740, and was a drunkard, a thief and a tramp for the last 40 years of her life, which ended in 1800. Her descendants numbered 834, of whom 709 were traced in local records from youth to death. One hundred and six of the 709 were born out of wedlock. There were 144 beggars and 62 more who lived from charity. Of the women, 181 led disreputable lives. There were in this family 76 convicts, 7 of whom were sentenced for murder. In a period of some 75 years this one family rolled up a bill of costs in almshouses, prisons and correctional institutions amounting to at least 5,000,000 marks, or about $1,250,000.—New York Tribune.

Freezing by Liquefied Air.

In Germany, since Professor Linde discovered a cheaper method of liquefying air, this commodity is sold by the quart in iron bottles, and a quart will do the work of a ten pound piece of ice. At present this air is more expensive than ice. A considerable reduction in cost will be necessary before any extensive change in our methods of refrigeration will take place. Again, the new chill producer, as at present known, is too active. Instead of producing a moderate coolness in an ice-box it freezes everything solid. The form of the bottle will have to be modified so as to lessen the area of evaporation. In handling the bottles one's fingers should be covered with insulating jackets of rubber to prevent freezing. A few years may perfect this method of refrigeration so that liquid air will be used entirely in place of ice.—Exchange.

President McKinley Will Appoint No More Consuls For a Time.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The president has determined not to consider any new consular appointments until congress meets, owing to the many requests that have come from senators and representatives that consideration be held up until they can see the president. There is also a great pressure of other business which is occupying the president's time.

Mr. McKinley has begun to collect material for his annual message and though he is far from beginning work upon the message he is making notes and jotting down suggestions from time to time as they occur to him.

A STATEMENT FOR SHERMAN.

Sheriff Martin in Harrisburg With His Side of the Shooting.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 21.—Sheriff Martin of Luzerne county has been in Harrisburg with his attorney, George S. Ferris, to confer with Governor Hastings, who was unavoidably absent. The executive wrote to the sheriff recently asking for a statement of the shooting at Lattimer, to be used by Secretary of State Sherman in making reply to the Austrian government, which has instructed its minister at Washington to get all the details of the affair.

The sheriff has prepared a statement giving his side of the story, which will be submitted to the governor in confidence on his return from Philadelphia. He declines to make public the document for fear the opposition might use it to advantage in the trial of the sheriff and his deputies for murder. The statement in brief recites that the sheriff and his deputies were in the discharge of their duty as public officials when the shooting occurred.

ADOLPH LUETGERT'S FATE.

One Man Stands Between Him and Death—Juror Harley Remains Firmly For Acquittal—Jury May Be Held Until Saturday Night.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Another night passed without a verdict in the Luetgert case. Some kind of a report is expected today.

For a time it was rumored that if the jury had not agreed by today it would be discharged as soon as it reported its inability to reach a verdict. This, however, is not the case. It is the firm determination of Judge Tutthill to keep the jury until Saturday night or late Saturday afternoon before he permits them to go with a disagreement. He has announced that both state and defense have spent so much money and time and the case has been so long and difficult to try that he will not consent to the discharge of the jury until there is no hope whatever of a verdict being received.

The jury stands about where it did. Reports vary from 9 for the death penalty to 3 for acquittal to 11 for death and 1 for acquittal. The one juror holding out for Luetgert is Harley, and it is thought that if he was to change front there would be little time lost. Juror Holabird is also credited with favoring the acquittal of the prisoner, but it is thought he will come around quickly if Harley could be induced to vote for conviction.

The feeling among the jurors who are in favor of the death penalty is high against Harley and they have done some very plain talking to him. At one time they even sent for Judge Tutthill to know among other things, if 11 men could compel one to vote with them, or if a verdict would be valid if but 11 men signed it. This is the incident that gave to the state that there is but one man standing between Luetgert and a death sentence.

SIXTY NEW FEVER VICTIMS.

Record Broken at New Orleans—Situation at Other Places.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 21.—All previous records as to the number of new cases has been broken. Sixty new cases have been entered in the books of the health board. At the same time there have been six deaths.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Surgeon General Wyman's bulletin of new cases and deaths from yellow fever is as follows: Mobile, 8 cases, 1 death; Edwards, Miss., 7 cases; Scranton, Miss., 16 cases, 1 death; Pascagoula, Miss., 3 cases, 1 death.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 21.—The bulletin issued by the board of health names five cases of yellow fever and one death.

A telegram from Birmingham announces that the "state government has been temporarily removed to Birmingham, that the governor and all state officers are located there." This is a distortion of the facts. The government is located here by the constitution and cannot be changed except by vote of the people. There is no provision for temporary removal. Furthermore, all the state offices are not located at Birmingham. Secretary of State Jackson, Auditor White, Treasurer Ellis and the governor's private secretary, Cary, are here.

DANA LAID TO REST.

Tracy and Croker Among Prominent People at the Funeral.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The funeral service over the remains of Charles A. Dana took place in St. Paul's Episcopal church at Glen Cove, L. I. Among the pallbearers were Justice Willard Bartlett, Congressman Frank Bartlett, General James H. Wilson, Prof. Charles S. Sargent of Harvard, Charles Dana, a cousin of the dead editor, and General Benjamin F. Tracy. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Dr. William R. Huntington, rector of the Grace church, New York, assisted by Rev. John Camack, rector of St. Paul's church of Glen Cove.

Among the prominent people who attended the funeral were United States Senator Thomas C. Platt, Marshal P. McMahon, Bourke Cochran, ex-Judge Henry E. Howland, Elihu Root, Charles Stewart Smith, Judge Frederick Smyth, Public Works Commissioner Collis, Postmaster Vancott and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Croker.

Gherardi Re-Elected Commander.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—At a meeting of the commandery in chief of the military order of the Loyal Legion of the United States Rear Admiral Bancroft Gherardi was re-elected commander-in-chief of the order.

Talent Transmitted by Drunkenness.

A special study of hereditary drunkenness has been made by Professor Pellmann of Bonn university, Germany. His method was to take certain individual cases, a generation or two back. He thus traced the careers of children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren in all parts of the present German empire until he was able to present tabulated biographies of the hundreds descended from some original drunkard. Notable among the persons described by Professor Pellmann is Frau Ada Jurke, who was born in 1740, and was a drunkard, a thief and a tramp for the last 40 years of her life, which ended in 1800. Her descendants numbered 834, of whom 709 were traced in local records from youth to death. One hundred and six of the 709 were born out of wedlock. There were 144 beggars and 62 more who lived from charity. Of the women, 181 led disreputable lives. There were in this family 76 convicts, 7 of whom were sentenced for murder. In a period of some 75 years this one family rolled up a bill of costs in almshouses, prisons and correctional institutions amounting to at least 5,000,000 marks, or about $1,250,000.—New York Tribune.

Freezing by Liquefied Air.

In Germany, since Professor Linde discovered a cheaper method of liquefying air, this commodity is sold by the quart in iron bottles, and a quart will do the work of a ten pound piece of ice. At present this air is more expensive than ice. A considerable reduction in cost will be necessary before any extensive change in our methods of refrigeration will take place. Again, the new chill producer, as at present known, is too active. Instead of producing a moderate coolness in an ice-box it freezes everything solid. The form of the bottle will have to be modified so as to lessen the area of evaporation. In handling the bottles one's fingers should be covered with insulating jackets of rubber to prevent freezing. A few years may perfect this method of refrigeration so that liquid air will be used entirely in place of ice.—Exchange.

THE SUFFERING OFFICESEEKERS.

President McKinley Will Appoint No More Consuls For a Time.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The president has determined not to consider any new consular appointments until congress meets, owing to the many requests that have come from senators and representatives that consideration be held up until they can see the president. There is also a great pressure of other business which is occupying the president's time.

Mr. McKinley has begun to collect material for his annual message and though he is far from beginning work upon the message he is making notes and jotting down suggestions from time to time as they occur to him.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 21.—A telegram has been received from Rev. Albert E. Keigwin, in Delaware, saying he had under consideration the call from the Second Presbyterian church and would give a positive answer early next week. The members of the congregation are much pleased over the prospect.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., THURSDAY, OCT. 21.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

Governor, Asa S. Bushnell.
Lieutenant governor, A. W. Jones.
Supreme judge, Jacob A. Burkett.
Attorney general, Frank Monnet.
State treasurer, Samuel Campbell.
School commissioner, L. D. Bonebrake.
Member of Board of Public Works, C. A. Soddard.
For Senator, W. V. Blake.
For Representative, P. M. Ashford of Washington township.
For Treasurer, Charles E. Smith of Fairfield township.
For Sheriff, Charles Gill of Liverpool township.
For Commissioner, W. K. George of Madison township.
For Prosecutor, J. H. Brookes of Liverpool township.
For Industry Director, C. D. Filson of Center township.

This practice his enemies have of calling Senator Hanna an anarchist comes with very poor grace from some quarters.

THEY say that Blanco is as bad as Weyer, and the statement is probably true. Spain is not now sending humanitarians to Cuba.

THE only men who do not think East Liverpool is going to give a big Republican majority this year are among the few who did not attempt to attend the Republican meeting last night.

THERE are some other laws in East Liverpool which need the attention of the police as much, if not more, than does the ordinance which prohibits the blocking of pavements. Will they be as rigidly enforced?

THAT talk about an anti-Tammany Democracy in New York is not creating the wildest enthusiasm imaginable.
Party service without the annual reward dispensed by the tiger is not highly appreciated in New York.

MR. BRYAN is stamping Nebraska at so much per stamp, and of course believes the state will go his way with many thousands to spare, which shows that William belongs to the class who will not learn by experience.

THE oft repeated charge that Senator Hanna spends his spare moments devising schemes by which he can crush his employees, is having little effect on the wage workers of Ohio. They have heard silly stories of that kind before.

M'KINLEY IS FIRST.

No man can deny that Senator Foraker stands foremost among the foremost men of the nation; but the order in which he last night placed the great men whose cause he championed might have been reversed. The NEWS REVIEW believes that the indorsement of the administration is first, and must, first of all things, be considered. Let the whole world know Ohio stands by the man who has stood by Ohio, and the other ends will more easily be accomplished.
We do not attempt to dim the glory surrounding Governor Bushnell's administration. The greatest praise accorded his public actions and private life would not compensate for the good he has done Ohio. Senator Hanna is a strong man and has done much for the Republican party, while General Prosperity is a favorite we all dearly love, but William McKinley is the statesman to whom we, in the darkest hours of financial depression, looked for relief, and he did not fail us. Let us honor him because of it.

A GOOD CAMPAIGNER.

Speaking more eloquently and carrying with it more weight than the strongest utterances of the best orator on the Republican platform, comes the revival in business to bring support to the ticket of protection and strengthen it by the influence of thousands who have been skeptical. Where a year ago a great many voters heard the arguments of the Republican party and voted for the St.
Louis platform because it appeared to them as being the best thing in its line at hand, they were not altogether certain that they were being hoodwinked and buncoed, as they had been hoodwinked and buncoed by their Democratic brethren a few years ago. Now they need go no farther than their own information. They are not asked to depend on this speaker or that speaker, nor upon this newspaper or that newspaper, they know that the promises of the last campaign have been carried out. The Republicans said that the passage of a protective tariff bill and the defeat of the free silver movement meant the opening of mills and factories, and the employment of thousands of idle men.

The tariff bill passed, silver did not raise its head, and as a result the factories are open and the men at work. Could the Republicans have a better campaigner? If the ticket can be elected on promises, what majority, think you, should it have when those promises have been carried out?

TO THE PUBLIC.

The columns of the NEWS REVIEW are, ever and alway, open to the public at large for the legitimate discussion of all questions of vital import to the masses. Those who exercise this right, and lay claim to this privilege, must keep within bounds and make use of language and expressions which are not offensive to the average reader and are backed by a due sense of the proprieties.
The NEWS REVIEW is Republican, from center to circumference, and aims to ever and alway work for the best interest of the grand old party. Good men and true should receive the nomination in this party; a class of men who demand and compel the respect of the great mass of Republican voters. In the selection of candidates, and in the nomination therefor, the Republican party declares that the majority of ballots cast shall rule. The NEWS REVIEW believes that the majority SHOULD rule, and that Right and Honor should control that majority. This is not always the case.
But the fault must be CORRECTED WITH-
IN the party, PREVIOUS to the NOMINA-TION, and not at a time when the correction might result in disaster to party and nation alike. Vital issues are at stake in this campaign. Possession is nine points of the law, and Republicans cannot afford, from any standpoint, to risk defeat and give aid, comfort and support to the Democracy. In national and state issues, the Republican party must be supreme. This is the belief of this paper, and the editorial columns of this paper voice, EXCLUSIVELY, its policy and principles. Being in full power, the Republican party MUST evolve the Right and Truth; and, if it fails in so doing, then will it be destroyed and disrupted, and the verdict will be just.

The Tonsiline Co.:

I take pleasure in saying that we have used Tonsiline in the family for ulcerated sore throat, and it not only seemed to prevent the attack from being so severe as formerly, but cured the throat completely in sore throat of any kind, the rush is for the Tonsiline bottle, and that is the last of it.

It is certainly a most excellent remedy.

EDITOR NEWS REVIEW:—I'm not a flatterer, and I don't carry my points or desires by flattery or soft soap. I don't owe your paper anything, and I'm not going to run for office. But I'm a reader of your paper and I like it very much.
I'm a square-toed, level headed Republican; and while I can't always back you up in everything you say in your columns, I admire you for your clean cut denunciation of evil and bad work in the city of East Liverpool. I know you have the backing of clean and honest Republicans, and I believe that nineteen twentieths of said Republicans commend your course in politics. You have made gallant battle against men whom you deemed unfit for nomination by the party, and you have stood gallantly by your comrades and true men, but have bowed to the inevitable, in the shape of the majority, and now stand by the Republican ticket. Shake, old man. I'll stand by you until the last button drops off, and I'll not drop off even then. I've went all around Robinson's barn in order to get at my point. Here it is:

"I'm mad as a wet hen; mad as a hornet when a school boy shies a dornick through its summer residence. Why?
Because I've paid out my good, solid, hard-earned ducats to aid the party in meeting current expenses, this embracing printing, and I find that said printing is being done in a COPPERHEAD sheet, the owners of which hate a Republican and have always done the Republican party all the harm which lies in their power. I'm not fighting your battles, old man; you're able to fight your own fight; but I hate my Republican money to be used in this way, and I swear that I'll not give another penny until the nasty feature is corrected, and I have lots of Republicans with me.
They tell me that Dan. Nellis places this printing. If he does, then he deserves a good kicking, and should be branded as an enemy and dropped from the party. There's lots of Republican printing offices, and if he must vent his petty spite against your paper, then let him get OUR printing done by a Republican friend, and not a Democratic foe.
If he uses his own money, taken out of his own pocket, then all right; but he can't use my money to aid Democracy and hard times, and he should not be allowed to use the money of any other TRUE Republican. Them's my sentiments, and I'll back 'em up all the way through. REPUBLICAN.

I'm not fighting your battles, old man; you're able to fight your own fight; but I hate my Republican money to be used in this way, and I swear that I'll not give another penny until the nasty feature is corrected, and I have lots of Republicans with me. They tell me that Dan. Nellis places this printing. If he does, then he deserves a good kicking, and should be branded as an enemy and dropped from the party. There's lots of Republican printing offices, and if he must vent his petty spite against your paper, then let him get our printing done by a Republican friend, and not a Democratic foe. If he uses his own money, taken out of his own pocket, then all right; but he can't use my money to aid Democracy and hard times, and he should not be allowed to use the money of any other TRUE Republican. Them's my sentiments, and I'll back 'em up all the way through.

Democrats Have No Issues In the Campaign.

HOW THE BILL WAS PASSED

Hon. Joseph B. Foraker and Hon. Robert W. Taylor Stated to a Large Assemblage of Republicans Some Interesting Features In Connection With the Creation of the Dingley Law—First Meeting Was a Rousing Meeting.

We of East Liverpool only open the campaign once a year, and, although the opening of this campaign has been delayed until the conflict is almost over, the enthusiasm and earnestness of the hundreds of loyal Republicans who cheered the name of McKinley at the old opera house last night and greeted Hon. J. B. Foraker and Hon. R. W. Taylor with a welcome those gentlemen will not soon forget, would be difficult of denial.

The hall was well filled when Chairman D. F. Nellis called the meeting to order, and there were few vacant seats when Secretary J. N. Hanley had completed the list of vice presidents and those gentlemen had taken their places on the stage. If it had been a session of all the prominent Republicans of southern Columbiana instead of a gathering of East Liverpool people it could not well have contained more representative men. They were all there, and so were a great many others, the backbone of the party, those who know what it has done and expect it to do much more.

Senator Foraker and Congressman Taylor sat side by side, one grown grayer and more portly since last he faced an audience in this place; the other as he always is, lithe and active and brimfull of vigor. Mr. Taylor was chairman of the meeting, and, after being presented, he said:

"I don't know who will introduce me, but I guess I'll have to do it myself, and let my actions speak for me. I am sure, ladies and gentlemen, that the Republicans of East Liverpool never had occasion to assemble when they had so many reasons for congratulation, and chief among them, most inspiring of all, is that a son of Ohio, the friend of East Liverpool, did much to bring it about. No man ever lived who labored as earnestly for this place as did the president of the United States. Of course, he did it because he is a useful man wherever you may put him, and because here, in his early days, he received so many words of comfort, and when he needed support it was East Liverpool that sprang as a man and made certain his career. So it is that our own son of Ohio is in the White House, and when East Liverpool is spoken of he knows where it is and what you want.

"That is personal, but with that Republican president there is a Republican congress, and they have enacted a bill which recognizes the great industry that has made East Liverpool great. It not only means that from a duty of 30 and 35 per cent we have gone to 55 and 60 per cent, but with a more friendly administration of the law in the custom houses, the American people will consume from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 each year more American pottery than in the last four years, and as much more as the increased consumptive power demands.

"I have the right to say that never a moment since last December, when the ways and means committee began the task of formulating the tariff bill, until in last July it was made a law, the duty of crockery was not in my thoughts and the subject of my endeavor. It fell on me to know what headway was being made, and to present to the committee our demand of duty. I therefore appear before you with a satisfying opinion of myself, no matter what you may think of it. We got what we were after. Members of the ways and means committee, and of the senate finance committee, had to get out of my way while the bill was under consideration, or hear something about pottery. I wanted to see it done, and I didn't want it to fail for want of the knowledge there was such a place as Liverpool, and I give you my word it's pretty well advertised in Washington.

"There are lots of Democrats here who are going to vote the Democrat ticket, and some who voted last fall who are not bragging about it, but want to go into a dark corner and kick themselves. They were honest, but they listened to the siren song of old leaders. Are they as fond of their Democracy as they were last year? This year every man knows why he is a Republican and every Democrat is questioning his Democracy. The Democratic orators will tell you there is no prosperity only that occasioned by a little famine in India, but no one is to be deceived. Four years ago they said we had never dreamed of what prosperity really was. They would show us, and they did. For four years we had as fine and well groomed a specimen of Democratic prosperity as the heart could desire. When they found it had failed they said give us free silver, but the American people concluded to try the Republican cure, and it's working pretty well. After it evidences its capacity, the man who doesn't support it doesn't like it. Vote the way you believe you ought to vote. The legislature will elect a senator, and if the Democrats control the legislature they will redistrict the state, and where you now have 16 Republicans and five Democrats, you will likely have five Republicans and 16 Democrats. We cannot afford to lose one man who supports Republican policies. The Republicans of Ohio are insisting on the re-election of Senator Hanna, responsible though the Democrats say that he is for many things.

Royal makes the food pure, wholesome and delicious.

"One day when the senate finance committee was wrestling with the duty on pottery I learned that things were approaching a crisis. I discovered the duty would likely be 45 or 50 per cent if we didn't correct it. I went to the Arlington hotel, and at the foot of the stairs met a man who was interested in pottery, and had said he would do all he could for it. I felt the crisis had come, and for five minutes I had as animated a conversation with him as I ever had with any one. He said he was going into the committee room and find what they were going to do, and if the duty was not right he would know the reason why. He went, and you know the result. That gentleman is with us tonight, and I take great pleasure in testifying to his efficient action for pottery. Fourteen years ago I presented him to an East Liverpool audience from this platform as the next governor of Ohio. I missed it, but two years later I did the same thing and he was elected. Now I want to introduce to you the man who has twice served you as governor and is now with more ability than ever serving you as senator. Ladies and gentlemen, Hon. Joseph B. Foraker."

MR. FORAKER'S ADDRESS.

It Went Down Into Many an Important Question.

"Our chairman has seen fit to recall my first visit to you, and inasmuch as he has spoken I may be pardoned if I refer to it," said Senator Foraker after the applause had died away. "I wondered then why they hadn't called in a man to preside. He looked like a boy of 17 or 18, but I was surprised when he made his speech. I have never forgotten it; just such a speech as was appropriate to a bright, vigorous community such as you had then and have again. I have had my eye on him since. He spoke of the services he rendered for the duty on crockery in a modest way, but I say no constituency was more efficiently represented. It was he who had pottery on his mind and tongue and in his eye, morning noon and night, and no one escaped him. Yet, he urged his cause with diplomacy. It was a pleasure to have him talk of the industry of East Liverpool.

"I want to call your attention to a peculiar feature of the campaign. I never knew one like it. We always have discussions, but this year there are none. The Democrats lived on free trade for a third of the century, until at last they got into power. As a result free trade wasn't much discussed by them last year. They substituted free silver, a Democrat, you know, always must have something free, and proposed by it to remedy the evil brought about by free trade. This year they don't discuss it, for it met with a mishap. It has had an unexpected taking off.

"When I was here two years ago, the old rink was crowded because you didn't have anything else to do. It is different now, because we have learned that if an article is made over there it is not made here, and if wages are paid over there they are not paid here, and every class of business consequently suffers.

"But I am not here without a mission. I am a lawyer. Four men are on trial, and I am here to champion their cause. They are Asa S. Bushnell, Marcus A. Hanna, William McKinley and General Prosperity. It's been a good while since we had the last gentleman with us. General Adversity was in command when I was here before, but he came to a timely end—pierced by spears of dollar wheat.

"Governor Bushnell has served you successfully, well and faithfully. You remember we made him governor because he was noble, manly, wholesome and a representative Republican and a first class business man. We needed one. Our Democratic friends want to be patriotic, they do the best they can, but they never seem to know how. When Governor Hoadley left his office he left a debt of $1,300,000, and it gave me a good bit of trouble. When we got things in good shape another Democrat slipped in, and when William McKinley took his seat it was worse than ever. He made some impression, but left a deficiency of more than $1,100,000. After Governor Bushnell was elected I took occasion to talk to him about it, and was surprised when he said he had a plan. Taxes on farm lands were high enough, he said, and if the legislature would work with him corporate franchises could be taxed. Those views were enacted into laws, and the bonds have been paid off and so have the advance drafts. Not only that, but there are tonight in the vaults of the state treasury at Columbus a round $1,000,000, every dollar as good as gold. Do you want to turn it over to a Democrat? We gave Bushnell 92,000 majority before. Let's make it 100,000 this time. There is no reason why we shouldn't, no one is running against him.

"McKinley is not a candidate, but his administration is on trial. I want to insist that he is entitled to your endorsement because he has kept faith, carrying out the party's promises, and as a result bringing about your prosperity. When he was elected the Democrats said, 'Where is your prosperity?' We said it took longer to drag a sled up hill than to ride down. The house was Republican, but the senate had 43 Republicans and 46 Democrats, Populists and silver men. It was reasonable to suppose that we would have some trouble to pass a tariff bill, a partisan measure, for it is highly important when you want to pass a bill that you have a majority. The business man said, 'I'll wait and see what the legislation will be.' Now, my Democratic friends, that was the matter from election day to the passage of the Dingley bill.

"Our constituents said to pass the bill like the house and come home. We were as anxious to pass it as they were to have us. Now, that house is peculiar. If Taylor wasn't here I would tell you that in Washington we speak of it as the house of Reed. Thomas B. is the speaker, and as the boys say he is the whole team and the dog under the wagon besides. We decided to caucus, and if it had not been for that caucus you would never have had the Dingley bill. We settled all controversy there, and went on the floor of the senate to vote for every schedule as one man, and stay there until we got the bill through. No matter how sharply the Democrats spoke, we didn't reply. It kept them in good humor and got us supporters for every schedule. If we couldn't get their votes we got them to take a walk while we voted. It took time, but was successful. Business didn't start until July 24 when the bill was passed and went to President McKinley for his signature, when he picked up a pen and wrote his name in characters as vigorous and emphatic as were those used by John Hancock when he signed the Declaration of Independence. That happened late in the afternoon. Until then there had been no revival. I can prove it by every Democrat in the United States. The following Monday at 6 a. m., the wheels began to turn and they have been turning ever since.

"The Democrats say wheat advanced because there was a short crop abroad. How about wool? Was there a short crop of sheep abroad? Take the railroads, we have given employment to more men in making new equipment than did the Democratic party in all its history. It's not due to the short crop of railroads abroad, but to the long crop of statesmanship at home.

"I believe that the election of Grover Cleveland was an act of God, for 'Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth.' We were prosperous. A generation grew up who knew not Joseph. We began to think, as the boys say, that we were the whole push. The Lord chose the Democrats as his agent to bring that affliction upon us. That's how they got in. They subverted to higher purpose in the economy of God, same as the small boy who follows a wagon up hill and chucks the wheel when they stop to blow the horses. It's not the most acceptable service, but the Democrats seem to like the job. When we have had adversity it was always under a Democratic administration. If I were a Democrat I would cease membership in the chuck party, and climb up in the wagon and help drive.

"I know of no man who voted for McKinley last year who should not endorse him this year. The administration has just commenced, we have only redeemed our first promise, and it is necessary that he be aided by a Republican majority in house and senate, and we don't want to commence by losing one from Ohio. No man of the 43 labored more honestly to accomplish the end attained by the enactment of the tariff than did Senator Hanna. I have heard that there is a good feeling toward me in this place. If that be true, my friends, don't send a Democrat to sit by me in the senate. I don't know who wants him or what good he could do.

"There are other questions of moment, but I have neither the time nor inclination to discuss them now. In the near future steps must be taken looking toward the construction of the Nicaragua canal, and if it is ever done the Republican party must do it. I want to see legislation that will secure the restoration of the merchant marine, extending the same principle of protection over the water as we have spread over the land.

"There is something else—whether we ratify the treaty annexing Hawaii. You know Russia has reached out to the Pacific, and Japan is active. There will be great commercial activity there very soon. These islands are the strategic position commanding the situation. If we don't take them someone else will. President Harrison hoisted the stars and stripes there, but Grover Cleveland hauled them down. Oh, my friends, what humiliating statesmanship was that!

"I pray that we may take Cuba with the other islands. The brutal tyranny and inhuman murder that we have witnessed constitutes a discredit to civilization and makes us ashamed. Cuba will be free, and it will not be five years until its population of Americans will be five times its population of today, and it will be governed with less difficulty than Alabama or Georgia.

"Let me appeal to you that by all these tokens you appreciate your duty when you go to the ballot box one week from next Tuesday. Good night."

ERNEST GAMBLE.

The Sweet Singer Captures the City of Wellsville.

There was a splendid audience of representative ladies and gentlemen present at the First Presbyterian church, Wellsville, last night, to hear Ernest Gamble, the wonderfully gifted basso. Mr. Gamble left a host of friends in East Liverpool, made friends through the instrumentality of a good voice, thoroughly cultured and cultivated, assisted by a splendid presence and most winning manner. He added to this host of admirers by his glorious singing in our sister city last night, being forced to respond to the enthusiastic encores. Reverend Lowry, pastor, acted as master of ceremonies, and he was delighted with the singing and warm welcome accorded his favorite, for Mr. Gamble is a personal friend of the reverend gentleman.

The rendition of "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" was simply superb; it was a gem in the diadem of song, rich in melody and sung so as to be conducive of veneration to the giver of all good gifts.

A number of East Liverpool residents were in attendance.

After Governor Bushnell was elected I took occasion to talk to him about it, and was surprised when he said he had a plan. Taxes on farm lands were high enough, he said, and if the legislature would work with him corporate franchises could be taxed. Those views were enacted into laws, and the bonds have been paid off and so have the advance drafts. Not only that, but there are tonight in the vaults of the state treasury at Columbus a round $1,000,000, every dollar as good as gold. Do you want to turn it over to a Democrat? We gave Bushnell 92,000 majority before. Let's make it 100,000 this time. There is no reason why we shouldn't, no one is running against him.

"McKinley is not a candidate, but his administration is on trial. I want to insist that he is entitled to your endorsement because he has kept faith, carrying out the party's promises, and as a result bringing about your prosperity. When he was elected the Democrats said, 'Where is your prosperity?' We said it took longer to drag a sled up hill than to ride down. The house was Republican, but the senate had 43 Republicans and 46 Democrats, Populists and silver men. It was reasonable to suppose that we would have some trouble to pass a tariff bill, a partisan measure, for it is highly important when you want to pass a bill that you have a majority. The business man said, 'I'll wait and see what the legislation will be.' Now, my Democratic friends, that was the matter from election day to the passage of the Dingley bill.

"Our constituents said to pass the bill like the house and come home. We were as anxious to pass it as they were to have us. Now, that house is peculiar. If Taylor wasn't here I would tell you that in Washington we speak of it as the house of Reed. Thomas B. is the speaker, and as the boys say he is the whole team and the dog under the wagon besides. We decided to caucus, and if it had not been for that caucus you would never have had the Dingley bill. We settled all controversy there, and went on the floor of the senate to vote for every schedule as one man, and stay there until we got the bill through. No matter how sharply the Democrats spoke, we didn't reply. It kept them in good humor and got us supporters for every schedule. If we couldn't get their votes we got them to take a walk while we voted. It took time, but was successful. Business didn't start until July 24 when the bill was passed and went to President McKinley for his signature, when he picked up a pen and wrote his name in characters as vigorous and emphatic as were those used by John Hancock when he signed the Declaration of Independence. That happened late in the afternoon. Until then there had been no revival. I can prove it by every Democrat in the United States. The following Monday at 6 a. m., the wheels began to turn and they have been turning ever since.

"The Democrats say wheat advanced because there was a short crop abroad. How about wool? Was there a short crop of sheep abroad? Take the railroads, we have given employment to more men in making new equipment than did the Democratic party in all its history. It's not due to the short crop of railroads abroad, but to the long crop of statesmanship at home.

"I believe that the election of Grover Cleveland was an act of God, for 'Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth.' We were prosperous. A generation grew up who knew not Joseph. We began to think, as the boys say, that we were the whole push. The Lord chose the Democrats as his agent to bring that affliction upon us. That's how they got in. They subverted to higher purpose in the economy of God, same as the small boy who follows a wagon up hill and chucks the wheel when they stop to blow the horses. It's not the most acceptable service, but the Democrats seem to like the job. When we have had adversity it was always under a Democratic administration. If I were a Democrat I would cease membership in the chuck party, and climb up in the wagon and help drive.

"I know of no man who voted for McKinley last year who should not endorse him this year. The administration has just commenced, we have only redeemed our first promise, and it is necessary that he be aided by a Republican majority in house and senate, and we don't want to commence by losing one from Ohio. No man of the 43 labored more honestly to accomplish the end attained by the enactment of the tariff than did Senator Hanna. I have heard that there is a good feeling toward me in this place. If that be true, my friends, don't send a Democrat to sit by me in the senate. I don't know who wants him or what good he could do.

"There are other questions of moment, but I have neither the time nor inclination to discuss them now. In the near future steps must be taken looking toward the construction of the Nicaragua canal, and if it is ever done the Republican party must do it. I want to see legislation that will secure the restoration of the merchant marine, extending the same principle of protection over the water as we have spread over the land.

"There is something else—whether we ratify the treaty annexing Hawaii. You know Russia has reached out to the Pacific, and Japan is active. There will be great commercial activity there very soon. These islands are the strategic position commanding the situation. If we don't take them someone else will. President Harrison hoisted the stars and stripes there, but Grover Cleveland hauled them down. Oh, my friends, what humiliating statesmanship was that!

"I pray that we may take Cuba with the other islands. The brutal tyranny and inhuman murder that we have witnessed constitutes a discredit to civilization and makes us ashamed. Cuba will be free, and it will not be five years until its population of Americans will be five times its population of today, and it will be governed with less difficulty than Alabama or Georgia.

"Let me appeal to you that by all these tokens you appreciate your duty when you go to the ballot box one week from next Tuesday. Good night."

ERNEST GAMBLE.

The Sweet Singer Captures the City of Wellsville.

There was a splendid audience of representative ladies and gentlemen present at the First Presbyterian church, Wellsville, last night, to hear Ernest Gamble, the wonderfully gifted basso. Mr. Gamble left a host of friends in East Liverpool, made friends through the instrumentality of a good voice, thoroughly cultured and cultivated, assisted by a splendid presence and most winning manner. He added to this host of admirers by his glorious singing in our sister city last night, being forced to respond to the enthusiastic encores. Reverend Lowry, pastor, acted as master of ceremonies, and he was delighted with the singing and warm welcome accorded his favorite, for Mr. Gamble is a personal friend of the reverend gentleman.

The rendition of "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" was simply superb; it was a gem in the diadem of song, rich in melody and sung so as to be conducive of veneration to the giver of all good gifts.

A number of East Liverpool residents were in attendance.

HEARD MANY QUESTIONS

The Missionary Fathers Answered Them All.

MAN, CITIZEN, CHURCH MEMBER

Allowed Them to Speak of Some Knotty Points in the Catholic Belief—Reverend Reed's Opinion Was Presented For Consideration.

t.S Aloysius church was well filled last evening to hear Fathers Kress and Graham discuss "The man, the citizen and church member."

Before the principal address Father Kress answered the following questions:

"Do Catholics desire the union of church and state? No, sir. It might work under exceptionally good conditions, but in real life it would not work to the best interests of the church. The Catholic church desires the greatest freedom in the exercise of her spiritual functions."

"Is not the Catholic church trying to get political control of this country? Not at all. The question of religion should not enter into politics. Just as much as we would disapprove of an anti-Catholic party we would disapprove of a Catholic party, or of a Methodist, or Presbyterian or any religious party."

"Can the pope or bishops dictate our politics? The church is a spiritual and the state is a temporal one. If they undertook to interfere in our politics we could not be held to obedience."

"Must Catholics obey their superiors when right or wrong? Never when wrong."

"Is Catholicity a foreign religion? The Catholic religion has a place in every country. It saw the beginning of every government that now exists in the civilized world. It was first grown when St. Augustine, the oldest city of the United States was settled. American independence was secured by Catholic influence. The church of Christ cannot be foreign in any country."

"What about the present anti-Catholic movement? It is only temporary and was founded on the grossest errors. Those who were honest in the movement have long since been persuaded of this."

"What is the attitude of the Catholic church toward the public school? It is in itself good, but it is not doing all that it should. The children should be given a religious training and under the present system that cannot be given. Catholics, however, in common with many other religious persons, maintain that the state could improve its education by offering facilities for parents to have their children educated in their religion. I am not talking for a compromise in this town because I know that would be impossible."

"In case of conflict between the two governments, whom will the Catholic obey, the president or the pope? If both remain in their own limit there will be no conflict. If the president commands me in spiritual things I will obey the pope, and if the pope commands me in civil things I will obey the president."

Father Graham then delivered the address of the evening on the "Church and State." It was one of the most entertaining of the week. He declared that the principles of the American republic were in perfect harmony with those of the Catholic church. He maintained that if a powerful civil authority is necessary for American liberty, so a powerful religious authority is necessary for Christian character. Many things were said to show that Catholics are good Americans, and he quoted Gen. Phil Sheridan as an example, and said no one could accuse him of being non-American because he was a Catholic.

The question box came next, and many and varied were the questions asked. The article by Rev. Reed, published yesterday in the NEWS REVIEW, was handed in as a question and Reverend Graham explained the Catholic side of the matter in a clear and logical manner. Tonight the subject will be: "What Becomes of Our Dead?"

Preparing For a Wedding.

Invitations were issued today which announce the marriage at noon, Thursday, Nov. 4, of Mr. F. Leslie Trump and Miss Ella Mountford. The ceremony will be performed at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Mountford in Second street, by Rev. Heber Hoskins, of St. Stephen's church.

FROM FOREIGN LANDS.

Interesting Topics That Engross the Attention of Europe.

Although President Faure's life has several times been attempted and is known to be threatened at the present moment by the anarchists, yet he declined to permit any members of the French police or Parisian detective force to accompany him to St. Petersburg, declaring that it would constitute a slur cast upon the hospitality of the czar and of the Muscovite nation. In this he differs from Emperor William, who during his stay in the Russian capital a fortnight previously was guarded by a perfect horde of Berlin police officers, although no attempt has ever yet been made upon his life or his existence in any way menaced.

English consular reports just issued in London call attention once more to the enormous amount of Belgian, French and German capital that has been invested in industrial enterprises in Russia during the last three years. Forty million dollars of Belgian money has been invested in iron works in Poland alone and is already yielding a return of 40 per cent. For some reason or other English and American capitalists are holding back, declining to take advantage of the opportunities placed at their disposal, although Russia is in the very infancy of its industrial development and will require foreign help in this respect for a long time to come.

The clearance sale of the British admiralty has now begun, and faded troopships, superannuated cruisers and obsolete torpedo boats are being offered to the highest bidder at absurd rates. Among the number are the Bacchante, a cruiser of nearly 3,000 tons, in which the Duke of York and his elder brother, the late Duke of Clarence, circumnavigated the globe. Another, the Canada, was one of the earliest cruisers to have an armor deck. The oldest of the vessels is the Vengeance, a wooden battleship armed with 84 guns and representing the type of man-of-war that figured in the battle of Trafalgar and other great naval conflicts in the early part of the century.

While in France the population is according to some stationary and according to others diminishing in size, the neighboring kingdom of Belgium is giving evidence of an altogether phenomenal growth. Official statistics just issued at Brussels show that the population has more than doubled during the century, while during the same period cities and towns have tripled and quadrupled their population, Antwerp having grown no less than 383 per cent since 1860.

President Kruger's sudden and totally unlooked for declaration to the effect that his government absolutely declines to recognize the suzerainty of Great Britain over the Transvaal, an announcement all the more unexpected by reason of his recent demonstrations of good will toward the English, may be accounted for by the exasperation which has been caused among the Boers by the news that Dr. Jameson has returned to Africa and that he is once more employed in an official capacity by the Chartered company, having been appointed to the command of the force which has just been dispatched from Salisbury against the witch doctor Kenlbin. At the time when the doctor was turned over by the Boers to the British authorities, immediately after the Transvaal raid, it was expressly stipulated that he should under no circumstances be permitted by the English government to return to South Africa, and the fact that he should be not only back there, but actually in command of an armed force, is naturally regarded as a gross breach of faith.

A painful impression has been created at Madrid by the refusal of Don Romero Robledo, the boss of the Conservative machine in Spain, to consent to any kind of conciliation with the important faction of dissident Conservatives under Senor Silvelas, the most honest and patriotic statesman in the kingdom, who has arrayed under his political banner men such as Martinez Campos, Captain General Blanco, and, in fact, all those Conservatives who are opposed to political corruption and in favor of a humane and sensible treatment of Cuba, as well as of the Philippine islands. A reconciliation between the two divided factions of the Conservative party would have strengthened the latter, as well as assured its continuance in office, whereas the continuance of the split will result in the overthrow of the cabinet.

That the lot of the sailor in the British mercantile marine is no bed of roses is shown by a report of the government board of trade just issued in London and according to which the number of cases of desertion during the 12 months which have just been brought to a close exceeds 14,000. With the exception of a few hundreds only, all these deserting seamen were what are known as long voyage men, and their abandonment of their ships in some foreign port, usually an American one, meant to them not only the sacrifice of character, with the certainty of imprisonment in the event of recapture either at home or abroad, but likewise the loss of all accumulation of pay, which is only given to the men on completing the time for which they have shipped. The board of trade calculates that, estimating the accumulated pay of each deserting sailor at a minimum average of $50, nearly $750,000 is thus lost to the sailors and to their families at home, the money, of course, remaining in the hands of their employers. The English government now proposes to devise means by which shipowners and ship masters who often brutally treat their men with the express object of inducing them to desert without demanding their pay should be forced to disgorge all such accumulations of wages for the benefit of the nearest relatives of the deserters. —New York Tribune

A UNION PACIFIC SUIT.

The Government Asks For an Accounting From Drexel and Morgan.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—A bill of complaint has been filed in the United States circuit court by George Hoadley, special assistant to Attorney General Joseph McKenna, in the suit brought by the United States against the Union Pacific Railway company and Frederick P. Coudert and others as receivers and J. Pierpont Morgan and others as partners under the firm name of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co.

Mr. Hoadley, in his complaint, makes request that he be furnished by the defendants with a statement showing the amount of assets and property turned over by the Union Pacific Railway company to Drexel, Morgan & Co. and J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. He also asks that defendants furnish a statement showing all the dealings of these two firms with the assets, and that they be required to show who is now in possession of the assets and property of the railway company and what portion now remains in the possession of these firms or other of the defendants. In the bill it is further asked that the defendants be required to show what amount of money or other property has been realized by J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. from the sale or other disposition of the assets of the railway company, and in whose possession these proceeds are at the present time. It is further asked that orders of the court may be issued making persons or corporations which have received any such asset or property, or the proceeds thereof from J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., and who are now possessed of any part of such assets or property, parties to the suit.

The Two Rulers Kissed.

WIESBADEN, Oct. 21.—The czar and the Grand Duke of Hesse have visited Emperor William here. They were met at the railroad depot by his majesty and the Prince of Schaumburg-Lippe. The two emperors cordially embraced and kissed each other. The czar returned to Darmstadt after lunch.

HEARD MANY QUESTIONS

The Missionary Fathers Answered Them All.

MAN, CITIZEN, CHURCH MEMBER

Allowed Them to Speak of Some Knotty Points in the Catholic Belief—Reverend Reed's Opinion Was Presented For Consideration.

t.S Aloysius church was well filled last evening to hear Fathers Kress and Graham discuss "The man, the citizen and church member."

Before the principal address Father Kress answered the following questions:

"Do Catholics desire the union of church and state? No, sir. It might work under exceptionally good conditions, but in real life it would not work to the best interests of the church. The Catholic church desires the greatest freedom in the exercise of her spiritual functions.

I am not talking for a compromise in this town because I know that would be impossible.

"In case of conflict between the two governments, whom will the Catholic obey, the president or the pope? If both remain in their own limit there will be no conflict. If the president commands me in spiritual things I will obey the pope, and if the pope commands me in civil things I will obey the president."

Father Graham then delivered the address of the evening on the "Church and State." It was one of the most entertaining of the week. He declared that the principles of the American republic were in perfect harmony with those of the Catholic church. He maintained that if a powerful civil authority is necessary for American liberty, so a powerful religious authority is necessary for Christian character. Many things were said to show that Catholics are good Americans, and he quoted Gen. Phil Sheridan as an example, and said no one could accuse him of being non-American because he was a Catholic.

The question box came next, and many and varied were the questions asked. The article by Rev. Reed, published yesterday in the News Review, was handed in as a question and Reverend Graham explained the Catholic side of the matter in a clear and logical manner. Tonight the subject will be: "What Becomes of Our Dead?"

FROM FOREIGN LANDS.

Interesting Topics That Engross the Attention of Europe.

Although President Faure's life has several times been attempted and is known to be threatened at the present moment by the anarchists, yet he declined to permit any members of the French police or Parisian detective force to accompany him to St. Petersburg, declaring that it would constitute a slur cast upon the hospitality of the czar and of the Muscovite nation. In this he differs from Emperor William, who during his stay in the Russian capital a fortnight previously was guarded by a perfect horde of Berlin police officers, although no attempt has ever yet been made upon his life or his existence in any way menaced.

English consular reports just issued in London call attention once more to the enormous amount of Belgian, French and German capital that has been invested in industrial enterprises in Russia during the last three years. Forty million dollars of Belgian money has been invested in iron works in Poland alone and is already yielding a return of 40 per cent. For some reason or other English and American capitalists are holding back, declining to take advantage of the opportunities placed at their disposal, although Russia is in the very infancy of its industrial development and will require foreign help in this respect for a long time to come.

The clearance sale of the British admiralty has now begun, and faded troopships, superannuated cruisers and obsolete torpedo boats are being offered to the highest bidder at absurd rates. Among the number are the Bacchante, a cruiser of nearly 3,000 tons, in which the Duke of York and his elder brother, the late Duke of Clarence, circumnavigated the globe. Another, the Canada, was one of the earliest cruisers to have an armor deck. The oldest of the vessels is the Vengeance, a wooden battleship armed with 84 guns and representing the type of man-of-war that figured in the battle of Trafalgar and other great naval conflicts in the early part of the century.

While in France the population is according to some stationary and according to others diminishing in size, the neighboring kingdom of Belgium is giving evidence of an altogether phenomenal growth. Official statistics just issued at Brussels show that the population has more than doubled during the century, while during the same period cities and towns have tripled and quadrupled their population, Antwerp having grown no less than 383 per cent since 1860.

President Kruger's sudden and totally unlooked for declaration to the effect that his government absolutely declines to recognize the suzerainty of Great Britain over the Transvaal, an announcement all the more unexpected by reason of his recent demonstrations of good will toward the English, may be accounted for by the exasperation which has been caused among the Boers by the news that Dr. Jameson has returned to Africa and that he is once more employed in an official capacity by the Chartered company, having been appointed to the command of the force which has just been dispatched from Salisbury against the witch doctor Kenilbin. At the time when the doctor was turned over by the Boers to the British authorities, immediately after the Transvaal raid, it was expressly stipulated that he should under no circumstances be permitted by the English government to return to South Africa, and the fact that he should be not only back there, but actually in command of an armed force, is naturally regarded as a gross breach of faith.

A painful impression has been created at Madrid by the refusal of Don Romero Robledo, the boss of the Conservative machine in Spain, to consent to any kind of conciliation with the important faction of dissident Conservatives under Senor Silvelas, the most honest and patriotic statesman in the kingdom, who has arrayed under his political banner men such as Martinez Campos, Captain General Blanco, and, in fact, all those Conservatives who are opposed to political corruption and in favor of a humane and sensible treatment of Cuba, as well as of the Philippine islands. A reconciliation between the two divided factions of the Conservative party would have strengthened the latter, as well as assured its continuance in office, whereas the continuance of the split will result in the overthrow of the cabinet.

That the lot of the sailor in the British mercantile marine is no bed of roses is shown by a report of the government board of trade just issued in London and according to which the number of cases of desertion during the 12 months which have just been brought to a close exceeds 14,000. With the exception of a few hundreds only, all these deserting seamen were what are known as long voyage men, and their abandonment of their ships in some foreign port, usually an American one, meant to them not only the sacrifice of character, with the certainty of imprisonment in the event of recapture either at home or abroad, but likewise the loss of all accumulation of pay, which is only given to the men on completing the time for which they have shipped. The board of trade calculates that, estimating the accumulated pay of each deserting sailor at a minimum average of $50, nearly $750,000 is thus lost to the sailors and to their families at home, the money, of course, remaining in the hands of their employers. The English government now proposes to devise means by which shipowners and ship masters who often brutally treat their men with the express object of inducing them to desert without demanding their pay should be forced to disgorge all such accumulations of wages for the benefit of the nearest relatives of the deserters. —New York Tribune.

A UNION PACIFIC SUIT.

The Government Asks For an Accounting From Drexels and Morgan.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—A bill of complaint has been filed in the United States circuit court by George Hoadley, special assistant to Attorney General Joseph McKenna, in the suit brought by the United States against the Union Pacific Railway company and Frederick P. Coudert and others as receivers and J. Pierpont Morgan and others as partners under the firm name of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co.

Mr. Hoadley, in his complaint, makes request that he be furnished by the defendants with a statement showing the amount of assets and property turned over by the Union Pacific Railway company to Drexel, Morgan & Co. and J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. He also asks that defendants furnish a statement showing all the dealings of these two firms with the assets, and that they be required to show who is now in possession of the assets and property of the railway company and what portion now remains in the possession of these firms or other of the defendants. In the bill it is further asked that the defendants be required to show what amount of money or other property has been realized by J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. from the sale or other disposition of the assets of the railway company, and in whose possession these proceeds are at the present time. It is further asked that orders of the court may be issued making persons or corporations which have received any such asset or property, or the proceeds thereof from J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., and who are now possessed of any part of such assets or property, parties to the suit.

WANT HIGHER WAGES

A Number of Men Left the Thomas Pottery.

WERE ORGANIZED LAST EVENING

They Presented Their Request This Morning and Were Discharged—They Asked an Increase of $1.35 a Day After Next Monday.

A strike was inaugurated at the plant of the Thomas company, this morning, and the strikers were discharged.

The men were last night organized, and became a part of the Federation of Labor, their society being known as the Pottery Workers' union. They presented a letter to L. M. Thomas which stated that all men in the company's employ, who now receive less than $1.35 a day, be given that amount after next Monday. They thought if the company could afford to pay some men $1.50 and $1.75 it could afford the advance asked. The letter ended: "We come to you this morning hoping that we may not cause any trouble nor hard feelings, but for our rights. Won't you let us live?"

Mr. Thomas stated that Manager Boch was out of town and he knew nothing about it. He then discharged the men. They say they will stay out until the demand is granted. At the works it was learned their places would not be filled until trade improved.

His Mother Would Do.

The Duke of Sutherland presented a park to one of the pottery towns. The opening was a big event, and the Prince of Wales was asked to perform the ceremony. A deputation waited on the prince accordingly, a wealthy and worthy magistrate being spokesman.

Honest old John was noted less for courtlike demeanor than for being large hearted, rough and ready and real Staffordshire. Unfortunately his royal highness was unable to comply.

"I should have been most happy," said he, "had I known sooner."

"Canna tha spare half a day just to show thy face?" said the worthy fellow. "We shall look fules when we get back." But the prince was inexorable.

Much disconcerted, the deputation seemed at a loss how to proceed. Suddenly an idea struck their resourceful leader, and, turning to the heir apparent, he said:

"Well, if tha canna come, send thy mother."—Strand Magazine.

The Spirit of Love.

Beyond all question, it is the unalterable constitution of nature that there is efficacy—divine, unspeakable efficacy—in love. The exhibition of kindness has the power to bring even the irrational animal into subjection. Show kindness to a dog, and he will remember it, he will be grateful, he will infallibly return love for love. Show kindness to a lion, and you can lead him by the mane, you can thrust your head into his mouth, you can melt the untamed ferocity of his heart into an affection stronger than death. And if this blessed influence should extend itself over the earth, a moral garden of Eden would exist in every land. Instead of the thorn and briar would spring up the fire tree and the myrtle; the desert would blossom and the solitary place be made glad.—New York Ledger.

The Last London Sweep.

The contemporary chimney sweeps, who still are of importance to London, are lusty youths and mature men, who work with a "machine" and bear relation to the ancient order commiserated by Lamb and purposely championed by Dickens only in their soot-grimed hands and blackened countenances. One of these, testifying at the inquest over William Price, summed up the grand difference between original worth and present degeneracy. "Lor' bless you, we ain't chimney sweeps nowadays; not a bit of it. We work with a lot of sticks. Anybody can do that. But he—ah, he wor a sweep, he wor! He could do our work, but we couldn't do his. There ain't no chimbleys, and there ain't no sweeps now."—London Letter.

The Saw.

Pliny says that the saw was first invented by Dædalus, but, according to Apollodorus, it was the invention of Talus, who used the jawbone of a crocodile to cut through a piece of wood and then made an iron instrument in imitation of it. The saw is represented on the monuments of Egypt from 2500 to 3000 B. C. As early as A. D. 1322 sawmills driven by water power were in operation at Augsburg, and, it is believed, before this they were in operation in Paris, driven by the current of the Seine. The first sawmill erected in the Norway provinces was in 1530. Sawmills were numerous in Italy in the sixteenth century. They were not introduced into England until 1663, when a native of Holland built one, but was compelled to abandon it by the opposition of the populace, carpenters and other artisans, who saw no good in such a new fangled contrivance.

THE TONE OF THE BELL

Not Improved by the Use of Gold or Silver in the Bell Metal.

There is a general belief that the introduction of silver or gold in the casting of a bell assures for it a superior tone, but an expert in founding bells says that such a belief is erroneous. He says that the best tone effect in bell metal is confined within very narrow limits, for any so called bell metal having more than 80 parts copper to 20 parts tin is too soft to produce the best quality of tone, while that having more tin than 23 parts in the 100 is much too brittle. There are bells in Europe whose clear tones were for many years credited to gold and silver that were supposed to have been added to the bell metal. An analysis was made not long ago of the metal in one of these bells, and it failed to show any trace of gold or silver. The old German bell founders used to make their bells of 80 parts copper to 20 parts tin. In the opinion of this expert the strongest and best toned bell is obtained from 79 parts copper and 21 parts tin.

"After the bell is 'drawn,'" says the expert, "two sweeps are made and adjusted to an upright spindle in the center of an iron case or flask, the flask having perforations all over it. Over the surface of the flask is coated, wet, a layer of loam of equal and suitable thickness and baked. Then another layer is coated on and baked, and so on, layer after layer, until the proper shape, etc., are secured. There are two such iron molding cases, one fitting over the other. The under one has the loam coating on its outer side, which has the inner shape of the proposed bell. The upper iron molding case or flask has the loam on its inner surface, forming the outside shape of the bell. This is let down over the under mold and carefully adjusted equally all around, leaving a space inside between the two molds. The under flask is called the core. The upper or outer one is called the case. The space is filled up by the molten bell metal, which, when cooled, is the bell."

"When the bell is taken out of the molds it is polished, and then the hangings, tongue (or clapper), etc., fitted to the bell, and it receives a severe ringing test, partly to ascertain its tone and resonant quality and to observe its mechanical excellence and adjustment. Then, if it appears to be good in all points, it is shipped to the purchaser. The making and shipping of a bell usually require from 10 to 15 days in the smaller sizes. The larger sizes—i. e., from 1,500 pounds and heavier—require more time. A peal of three or more bells requires from 40 to 90 days' time, while a chime of nine or more bells requires from three to six months."

"Any foundry can, of course, readily make and select nine or ten bells in tune for a chime, but tune is one thing, tone is another."—Church Economist.

The Piano of the Future.

No more hammers in pianos. The old fashioned method of pounding music out of wires by the aid of a wonderfully complicated system of levers and keys, which all the world thought to be the ultimate perfection for the production of that sort of tone, has been branded as a back number.

Dr. Richard Eisemann of Berlin, for years a pupil of Professor Von Helmholtz, has patented a system which does away with the levers entirely. He calls this new appliance the electrophonic piano, its distinctive principle consisting in the fact that the vibrations of the chords are not produced by hammers, but by an electric current and by means of microphones acting as interrupters of currents.

All the delicate and complex mechanism of the old piano is done away with. The little electric devices are arranged on the crosspiece extending over the strings. Upon this electric magnets are placed so as to be only a hair's breadth from the strings.

Pressing down the key sends the electric current into the corresponding electromagnet. This attracts the metallic string below, but the microphone interrupts the current and therewith the attraction. The string returns to its former place, and this continued attraction and interruption of the current are carried on, the number of vibrations being regulated by the pitch of the string.

The high sounds produced by this method have a decided harp tone, and the lower and middle registers suggest the cello or the organ. In reality, the installation of this new system creates a new instrument, so different are the qualities of sound produced by the new method and the old.—New York Journal.

To Halifax.

At Tompkinsville the warship lay,
With milk white sides and decks of snow
The captain's coat was all gold and blue,
The collar and cuffs were a spotless hue,
But trouble was on his brow.

My ship is all that a sailor could wish;
Her armor is thick and her guns are true,
With powder and ball I am well supplied,
My officers all are faithful and tried,
And nothing could beat my crew

But all this praise is of no avail,
For a fatal defect is here—
My ship needs docking and must be scraped,
And this before her course is shaped
On another cruise this year.

And this is the answer I get from Long:
"The truth I'm ashamed to tell—
We have no dock that can hold your ship,
She's too long and too deep for the Brooklyn slip,
And so you can go to—Halifax!"

Klondyke

The Land of Golden Nuggets.

JOSEPH LADUE,

the new Bonanza King of the Klondyke Gold Regions, gives the facts. His book reads like "The Arabian Nights," BUT Joseph Ladue KNOWS whereof he writes. He was the first man on the spot when the first gold was discovered last August, 1896. He located one rich claim and immediately purchased twelve others at a low price before their value was known. He has refused $100,000 for any ONE of these claims, as they are rich with virgin gold nuggets, beyond the dream of avarice. Joseph Ladue then at the mouth of the Klondyke and Yukon Rivers, by erecting the first house in the region in September, one month after the gold was first discovered. He bought 178 acres from the government on the city site where his town lots 150x50 are now selling for $5,000 each.

Mr. Ladue was fortunate enough to be successful in his trading post investments to have on hand ample capital to carry out his plans, and there is no man living who is better posted on Alaska and the great North West Territories than Mr. Joseph Ladue. He has just returned from that country to his old home in Schuler Falls, N. Y., where he passed a large portion of his boyhood and early manhood. Mr. Ladue left his home nearly twenty years ago to seek his fortune in the west going first to the Black Hills, where he was successful in gold mining, thence to Arizona and the Pacific coast and finally located in Alaska and the northwest, where he has covered almost the entire country since 1882. Mr. Ladue is a typical pioneer: strong, hardy and resolute—a man of iron as one must needs be to go through the hardships he has and come out with a constitution unbroken and unimpaired at about the age of 43. Mr. Ladue has not only worked his muscles to good advantage to himself with the result of an abundance of the world's goods, far beyond the dreams of men, but he has evidently all this time been closely observing the conditions of that strange country—the Yukon Valley—which has so suddenly become one of the great centers upon which human interest throughout the world is focussed.

When the wonderful stories began to come down from the Yukon country it was naturally concluded that it was at least half exaggeration. That any such amount of gold could be taken in so short a time from a country like that under the most most unfavorable conditions was held to be incredible. But when the great bags of virgin gold began to be poured out upon mint counters in San Francisco under the eyes of the whole world (for modern journalism does this, annihilating time and space) people began to wonder and the wonder grew day by day as the real facts were disclosed, and now people who are well informed as to the facts declare that half the truth has not been told of the golden treasures of the Yukon Valley.

As we have already said, there is no man today alive who knows more about this wonderful country than does Mr. Ladue. What makes his talk of it specially interesting and reliable is the fact that his knowledge of it is practical. It has not been gained from hearsay nor from desultory visits made now and then at certain favorable seasons of the year, but from steady living there through the long summer days and the long winter nights, year in and year out for 15 years, where he now owns the best mining claims on the Klondyke and its tributaries.

In presenting his book to the public we do so knowing that it is by an authority on the subject of which he writes. His first work entitled

"Klondyke Nuggets"

is a brief description of the new gold regions, and anyone desiring authentic information should not fail to avail themselves of our

A Number of Men Left the Thomas Pottery.

WERE ORGANIZED LAST EVENING

They Presented Their Request This Morning and Were Discharged—They Asked an Increase of $1.35 a Day After Next Monday.

A strike was inaugurated at the plant of the Thomas company, this morning, and the strikers were discharged.

The men were last night organized, and became a part of the Federation of Labor, their society being known as the Pottery Workers' union. They presented a letter to L. M. Thomas which stated that all men in the company's employ, who now receive less than $1.35 a day, be given that amount after next Monday. They thought if the company could afford to pay some men $1.50 and $1.75 it could afford the advance asked. The letter ended: "We come to you this morning hoping that we may not cause any trouble nor hard feelings, but for our rights. Won't you let us live?"

Mr. Thomas stated that Manager Boch was out of town and he knew nothing about it. He then discharged the men. They say they will stay out until the demand is granted. At the works it was learned their places would not be filled until trade improved.

His Mother Would Do.

The Duke of Sutherland presented a park to one of the pottery towns. The opening was a big event, and the Prince of Wales was asked to perform the ceremony. A deputation waited on the prince accordingly, a wealthy and worthy magistrate being spokesman.

Honest old John was noted less for courtlike demeanor than for being large hearted, rough and ready and real Staffordshire. Unfortunately his royal highness was unable to comply.

"I should have been most happy," said he, "had I known sooner."

"Canna tha spare half a day just to show thy face?" said the worthy fellow. "We shall look fules when we get back." But the prince was inexorable.

Much disconcerted, the deputation seemed at a loss how to proceed. Suddenly an idea struck their resourceful leader, and, turning to the heir apparent, he said:

"Well, if tha canna come, send thy mother."—Strand Magazine.

The Spirit of Love.

Beyond all question, it is the unalterable constitution of nature that there is efficacy—divine, unspeakable efficacy—in love. The exhibition of kindness has the power to bring even the irrational animal into subjection. Show kindness to a dog, and he will remember it, he will be grateful, he will infallibly return love for love. Show kindness to a lion, and you can lead him by the mane, you can thrust your head into his mouth, you can melt the untamed ferocity of his heart into an affection stronger than death. And if this blessed influence should extend itself over the earth, a moral garden of Eden would exist in every land. Instead of the thorn and briar would spring up the fir tree and the myrtle; the desert would blossom and the solitary place be made glad.—New York Ledger.

The Last London Sweep.

The contemporary chimney sweeps, who still are of importance to London, are lusty youths and mature men, who work with a "machine" and bear relation to the ancient order commiserated by Lamb and purposely championed by Dickens only in their soot grimed hands and blackened countenances. One of these, testifying at the inquest over William Price, summed up the grand difference between original worth and present degeneracy. "Lor! bless you, we ain't chimney sweeps nowadays; not a bit of it. We work with a lot of sticks. Anybody can do that. But he—ah, he wor a sweep, he wor! He could do our work, but we couldn't do his. There ain't no chimbleys, and there ain't no sweeps now."—London Letter.

The Saw.

Pliny says that the saw was first invented by Daedalus, but, according to Apollodorus, it was the invention of Talus, who used the jawbone of a crocodile to cut through a piece of wood and then made an iron instrument in imitation of it. The saw is represented on the monuments of Egypt from 2500 to 3000 B. C. As early as A. D. 1322 sawmills driven by water power were in operation at Augsburg, and, it is believed, before this they were in operation in Paris, driven by the current of the Seine. The first sawmill erected in the Norway pineries was in 1530. Sawmills were numerous in Italy in the sixteenth century. They were not introduced into England until 1663, when a native of Holland built one, but was compelled to abandon it by the opposition of the populace, carpenters and other artisans, who saw no good in such a new fangled contrivance.

THE TONE OF THE BELL

Not Improved by the Use of Gold or Silver in the Bell Metal.

There is a general belief that the introduction of silver or gold in the casting of a bell assures for it a superior tone, but an expert in founding bells says that such a belief is erroneous. He says that the best tone effect in bell metal is confined within very narrow limits, for any so called bell metal having more than 80 parts copper to 20 parts tin is too soft to produce the best quality of tone, while that having more tin than 23 parts in the 100 is much too brittle. There are bells in Europe whose clear tones were for many years credited to gold and silver that were supposed to have been added to the bell metal. An analysis was made not long ago of the metal in one of these bells, and it failed to show any trace of gold or silver. The old German bell founders used to make their bells of 80 parts copper to 20 parts tin. In the opinion of this expert the strongest and best toned bell is obtained from 79 parts copper and 21 parts tin.

"After the bell is 'drawn,'" says the expert, "two sweeps are made and adjusted to an upright spindle in the center of an iron case or flask, the flask having perforations all over it. Over the surface of the flask is coated, wet, a layer of loam of equal and suitable thickness and baked. Then another layer is coated on and baked, and so on, layer after layer, until the proper shape, etc., are secured. There are two such iron molding cases, one fitting over the other. The under one has the loam coating on its outer side, which has the inner shape of the proposed bell. The upper iron molding case or flask has the loam on its inner surface, forming the outside shape of the bell. This is let down over the under mold and carefully adjusted equally all around, leaving a space inside between the two molds. The under flask is called the core. The upper or outer one is called the case. The space is filled up by the molten bell metal, which, when cooled, is the bell. "When the bell is taken out of the molds it is polished, and then the hangings, tongue (or clapper), etc., fitted to the bell, and it receives a severe ringing test, partly to ascertain its tone and resonant quality and to observe its mechanical excellence and adjustment. Then, if it appears to be good in all points, it is shipped to the purchaser. The making and shipping of a bell usually require from 10 to 15 days in the smaller sizes. The larger sizes—i. e., from 1,500 pounds and heavier—require more time. A peal of three or more bells requires from 40 to 90 days' time, while a chime of nine or more bells requires from three to six months.

"Any foundry can, of course, readily make and select nine or ten bells in tune for a chime, but tune is one thing, tone is another."—Church Economist.

The Piano of the Future.

No more hammers in pianos. The old fashioned method of pounding music out of wires by the aid of a wonderfully complicated system of levers and keys, which all the world thought to be the ultimate perfection for the production of that sort of tone, has been branded as a back number.

Dr. Richard Eisemann of Berlin, for years a pupil of Professor Von Helmholtz, has patented a system which does away with the levers entirely. He calls this new appliance the electrophonic piano, its distinctive principle consisting in the fact that the vibrations of the chords are not produced by hammers, but by an electric current and by means of microphones acting as interrupters of currents.

All the delicate and complex mechanism of the old piano is done away with. The little electric devices are arranged on the crosspiece extending over the strings. Upon this electric magnets are placed so as to be only a hair's breadth from the strings.

Pressing down the key sends the electric current into the corresponding electromagnet. This attracts the metallic string below, but the microphone interrupts the current and therewith the attraction. The string returns to its former place, and this continued attraction and interruption of the current are carried on, the number of vibrations being regulated by the pitch of the string.

The high sounds produced by this method have a decided harp tone, and the lower and middle registers suggest the cello or the organ. In reality, the installation of this new system creates a new instrument, so different are the qualities of sound produced by the new method and the old.—New York Journal.

To Halifax.

At Tompkinsville the warship lay,
With milk white sides and decks of snow
The captain's coat was all gold and blue,
The collar and cuffs were a spotless hue,
But trouble was on his brow.

My ship is all that a sailor could wish;
Her armor is thick and her guns are true,
With powder and ball I am well supplied,
My officers all are faithful and tried,
And nothing could beat my crew

But all this praise is of no avail,
For a fatal defect is here—
My ship needs docking and must be scraped,
And this before her course is shaped
On another cruise this year.

And this is the answer I get from Long:
"The truth I'm ashamed to tell—
We have no dock that can hold your ship.
She's too long and too deep for the Brooklyn slip."

And so you can go to—Halifax!"

Klondyke

The Land of Golden Nuggets.

JOSEPH LADUE,

the new Bonanza King of the Klondyke Gold Regions, gives the facts. His book reads like "The Arabian Nights," BUT Joseph Ladue KNOWS whereof he writes. He was the first man on the spot when the first gold was discovered last August, 1896. He located one rich claim and immediately purchased twelve others at a low price before their value was known. He has refused $100,000 for any ONE of these claims, as they are rich with virgin gold nuggets, beyond the dream of avarice. Joseph Ladue then at the mouth of the Klondyke and Yukon Rivers, by erecting the first house in the region in September, one month after the gold was first discovered. He bought 178 acres from the government on the city site where his town lots 150x50 are now selling for $5,000 each.

Mr. Ladue was fortunate enough to be successful in his trading post investments to have on hand ample capital to carry out his plans, and there is no man living who is better posted on Alaska and the great North West Territories than Mr. Joseph Ladue. He has just returned from that country to his old home in Schuler Falls, N. Y., where he passed a large portion of his boyhood and early manhood. Mr. Ladue left his home nearly twenty years ago to seek his fortune in the west going first to the Black Hills, where he was successful in gold mining, thence to Arizona and the Pacific coast and finally located in Alaska and the northwest, where he has covered almost the entire country since 1882. Mr. Ladue is a typical pioneer: strong, hardy and resolute—a man of iron as one must needs be to go through the hardships he has and come out with a constitution unbroken and unimpaired at about the age of 43. Mr. Ladue has not only worked his muscles to good advantage to himself with the result of an abundance of the world's goods, far beyond the dreams of men, but he has evidently all this time been closely observing the conditions of that strange country—the Yukon Valley—which has so suddenly become one of the great centers upon which human interest throughout the world is focussed.

When the wonderful stories began to come down from the Yukon country it was naturally concluded that it was at least half exaggeration. That any such amount of gold could be taken in so short a time from a country like that under the most most unfavorable conditions was held to be incredible. But when the great bags of virgin gold began to be poured out upon mint counters in San Francisco under the eyes of the whole world (for modern journalism does this, annihilating time and space) people began to wonder and the wonder grew day by day as the real facts were disclosed, and now people who are well informed as to the facts declare that half the truth has not been told of the golden treasures of the Yukon Valley.

As we have already said, there is no man today alive who knows more about this wonderful country than does Mr. Ladue. What makes his talk of it specially interesting and reliable is the fact that his knowledge of it is practical. It has not been gained from hearsay nor from desultory visits made now and then at certain favorable seasons of the year, but from steady living there through the long summer days and the long winter nights, year in and year out for 15 years, where he now owns the best mining claims on the Klondyke and its tributaries.

is a brief description of the new gold regions, and anyone desiring authentic information should not fail to avail themselves of our
